A newly discovered comet is visible for the next few days, says a Michigan State University astronomer, Robert C. Victor, who drew up this guide for anyone who wants to see it. The comet is a dim one, so you may not be able to see it if you're in a town; country viewing is recommended. As the eighth comet discovered this year, its official name is Comet 1975, or the Kobayashi-Berger-Milon Comet.

Fake Police Officer Robs California Truck Driver

A Pajoma, Calif., truck driver thought he was being stopped by a policeman Monday when a man in an unmarked sedan pulled alongside his truck and flashed a hand-held red light at him.

He changed his mind when the man pulled a gun and robbed him of $750 in cash.

Phillip M. Jackson, 46, an American Rental Systems truck driver, told Lancaster County deputy sheriffs he was eastbound on Hwy. 2 near 70th about 11:45 a.m. when he first noticed the car following him.

The car pulled even with his cab, Jackson said, and a man inside flashed a hand-held red light at him.

Jackson told deputies he pulled to the side of the road, and the car stopped in front of him. A black male wearing a law enforcement-type uniform, complete with badge, shoulder patch and gun belt, got out and approached his truck, he said.

Jackson said the man then pulled a .38 caliber revolver and took the $750. After telling Jackson to walk to the rear of his truck and stay away from his citizens band radio, the man drove east on Hwy. 2, he said.

Deputies would not say if the uniform resembled any of those worn locally other than to say that it did not resemble their own uniforms.

The sheriff's office described the suspect as a black male, six feet tall, weighing 200 pounds, wearing a khaki-colored shirt and pants with a badge, shoulder patch and gun belt. He is said to be driving a late model brown Chrysler with antennae on the right front, roof and left rear.

The license plate had a white background, deputies said.

Council May Okay End Of Police Review Board

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The much talked about police review board appears heading for an early death next week.

The City Council, in a surprise move late Monday night, voted to bring action on Councilman John Robinson's proposal next week. By acting on the matter, the council will be erasing the weeks of work done by the Human Rights Commission which has been reviewing the proposal at the council's request. A recommendation was expected by late August or early September.

Councilman Dick Baker said it was time the council made the decision on the police review board since, he argued, the proposal is creating a morale problem in the Lincoln Police Department and because citizens say they don't want it.

Councilman Max Denney concurred with Baker that the proposal "is creating a lot of unrest in the Police Department and creating a lot of unrest in the community."

Although the councilmen didn't mention it, apparently some of that concern about morale in the department stems from reports that some officers feel they will have to unionize to protect themselves from a citizens review board.

Last week, 28 officers met to discuss the formation of a police union. The Police Department has been opposing the creation of a police review board on the grounds that such boards have failed in other cities.

While Councilmen Steve Cook and Bob Sikyta went along with Baker and Denney in calling for a vote next week, Councilwoman Sue Bailey called such action "sure idiosy."

The council referred the issue to the Human Rights Commission, which has been holding weekly meetings on the proposal for six months.

Mrs. Bailey said she is "unaware of any great unrest" over the matter and thought the commission was progressing in formulating a recommendation.

Councilman Bob Jeambey urged the lawmakers to give the commission a chance to report back, if for no other reason than to "restore some badly needed trust in the community and the Police Department."

17 Said Killed In Armenian Plane Crash

MOSCOW (AP) — A small Armenian airplane recently crashed near the Georgian city of Batumi, apparently killing at least 17 Soviet occupants, it was learned here Monday.

A Yak40, the most widely used Soviet jetliner for short domestic flights, crashed near the airport on the outskirts of the Black Sea port city, according to the Armenian newspaper Kommunist.

This is believed to be the first publicly reported crash of a Yak40, a plane widely vaunted by the Soviets and bought by several foreign countries.

Robinson, who is proposing the creation of a nine-member citizens panel, pointed out there is a "great deal of disagreement" among members of the Human Rights Commission on the matter. Any recommendation, therefore, would be "well thought out," Robinson said.

Cook said rejection of the proposal now wouldn't preclude the new police chief from reviewing the question. Mayor Helen Bosalis is reviewing applicants for the chief's job.

Since the council decided to dispose of the police board next Monday, it appears that Robinson's proposal is washed up, at least for the time being.

SeTech Support Will Cost 2.3 Mills

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Property owners in 15 counties will pay a new 2.3-mill levy, local support in a $5.6 million budget approved Monday night by the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) Area Board.

No one appeared at the public hearing to comment on the 1975-76 budget, a 17.3% increase over the previous fiscal year.

Greatest increases will be 133% in the capital equipment budget for the Milford campus, to $224,000; Lincoln campus programs receive a $90,000 boost, and the college area office budget for personal services will increase from $73,000 to $149,000.

A new $149,828 item will provide workshops, seminars and instructional programs at 15 community centers, to serve at least 3,000 people. Tuition at 50 cents per hour plus reimbursements will reduce the program cost to $79,128.

Of the $11.6 million in state aid allocated for the six community college areas, SeTech President Robert Eicher estimated it will receive $2.85 million.

Tuition and fees from the Fairbury, Lincoln and Milford campuses and SeTech area operations will total $824,828; federal reimbursements, $280,000; cash carryover, $377,804, and the revolving account (such as income from student-built projects), $30,000.

SeTech will levy 2.3 mills against assessed property, less than the 2.5-mill maximum under a 1975 law, LB344. Of the local tax, 1.35 mills will generate $2 million for operations; and one mill, about $1.4 million for construction.

Uncollected taxes, which will be paid SeTech in the next fiscal year, reduce the 1975-76 local tax support to 65% of the operations total, or $1.3 million.

The total revenue expected, $5,545,325, is short of the $5,875,781 budget adopted, thus requiring an operating deficit of $130,456. Late tax collections will cover those expenses.

Eicher will present certified copies of the budget to the 15 county commissioners in southeast Nebraska. In Richardson County, he said local reaction was one of surprise — many residents and officials were "unaware a mill levy would be assessed" under LB344, which reorganized the community college system and its financing.

In closed session, board members discussed amounts of pay increases and fringe benefits to be awarded staff members in the 1975-76 budget. A board team has been negotiating with the Southeast Community College Faculty Association.

However, the board deferred action on staff contracts, and referred the proposed negotiated agreement back to committee for possible revisions.

In other business, the board approved incorporation of the Nebraska Association of Community College Trustees (NACCT) as a non-profit organization and SeTech's membership in it.

Board member Don Nielsen of Lincoln said the

Ford Praises Accord President In Warsaw

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — President Ford, welcomed to Warsaw Monday by an estimated 250,000 Poles, joined Polish leader Edward Gierek in praising the controversial European security agreement to be signed this week in Helsinki.

Ford's arrival marked the second visit to Poland by an American president.

In a joint statement after brief talks, Ford and Gierek said the 35-nation Helsinki pact could become "a genuine and strong stimulus for positively shaping relations among the participant states." The agreement has no enforcement provisions but is to serve as a code of conduct.

The Ford-Gierek communique did not mention the document's reference to maintaining post-World War II European frontiers — a point that has led some American politicians to criticize Ford on grounds that the agreement ratifies Soviet dominance in Eastern Europe.

When he addresses the Helsinki gathering, Ford is expected to emphasize that the United States does not regard the agreement as approval of Russia's war gains.

Gierek, first secretary of Poland's Communist party, raised the sensitive issue in a toast to Ford. The Helsinki agreement, he said, "shall be of paramount importance for the consolidation of peace in Europe, which rests on the foundation of the inviolability of the political and territorial order established as a result of the victory of nations over nazism, of the historic Potsdam decisions and postwar developments."

In the official communique, Poland offered some backing for America's desire for results at negotiations in Vienna on an East-West troop cut-back. It said political detente should be supplemented by a military detente and added the two countries "attach significant importance to the Vienna talks on the mutual reduction of armed forces and armament in Central Europe."

Gierek, leading the welcoming delegation when the President arrived from Bonn, West Germany, declared: "Doors all over Poland are wide open to you."

Ford responded that he had come to "strengthen the traditional friendship between our two peoples."

Later in the day, Ford spent 15 minutes walking the cobbled streets of Warsaw's Old Town, an area destroyed during World War II and later rebuilt. A woman selling fresh fruit beneath a green and orange umbrella in a market square pressed a basket of apples and pears on the President. He munched appreciatively on one of the pears.

At the airport, Ford had watched Polish troops march by in a strutting goosestep before entering a Russian-made open car with Gierek for a motorcade through Warsaw.

Polish officials listed the crowd at about a quarter-million. For the most part, people stood by impassively as the cars passed. A few bystanders occasionally waved small American and Polish flags.

The welcome was about the same size but much quieter than that given Richard M. Nixon when he came here in 1972.

Local Communist party officials organized Monday's reception, which was announced publicly a week ago, but apparently ran into indifference because of vacations.

After the motorcade from the airport to his residence, a centuries-old former castle, Ford went to the Polish tomb of the unknown soldier in a bombed-out remnant of Old Warsaw at Victory Square.

Standing under gray skies, the President placed a large wreath on the tomb and wrote in the memorial guest book: "In honor of all those who gave their lives for our freedom and yours."

Underlining the largely symbolic tone of the President's stay will be his schedule for Tuesday. Ford flies to Krakow in southern Poland and from there to Auschwitz, scene of the Nazi death camp which claimed the lives of three million Jews during World War II.

He also will tour a pediatrics institute in Krakow and a market square where he will give a speech before departing for Helsinki.

Deducting Gift Of Gift Perfectly Legal

(c) Washington Star

Washington — The practice of a number of congressmen of donating accumulated copies of the Congressional Record to institutions and then claiming charitable deductions on their tax returns has been revealed as a result of an obscure tax ruling recently issued by the Internal Revenue Service.

This congressional perquisite, financed by the taxpayer, has been confirmed by the IRS as perfectly legal.

It does not conflict with the 1969 tax reform act which nullified President Richard M. Nixon's attempt to deduct a half-million dollars for the gifts of his vice presidential papers and which earned bandleader Skitch Henderson a six-month jail term and $10,000 fine when he backdated a gift of music writings supposedly worth $350,000 to the University of Wisconsin.

Unlike the Nixon papers and the Henderson music scores, the accumulated verbatim transcripts of congressional proceedings which make up the Congressional Record are not considered by IRS to be "literary compositions, letters or memoranda or similar property."

This means that the attic storage areas of the House and Senate office buildings are veritable treasure trove of tax deductions, because that's where the tons and tons of accumulated records end up, largely unread and gathering dust.

Writing off charitable contributions of the Congressional Record may be legal, but is it ethical? Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., a man noted for his fiscal probity and faultless personal behavior, thinks not. Says Hatfield: "I suppose, in a sense, they become your personal property. But the practice certainly raises a question of ethics and anyone who does it would be politically vulnerable."

The IRS ruling was issued following a query from an unnamed member of Congress who had a load of bound copies of the Record and wanted to be sure it was legal to donate them and take a charity deduction.

It also brought to light details of a largely unknown practice by the Government Printing Office of providing Congress with bound copies of the Record, which costs the taxpayer about $2 million a year, according to a GPO spokesman.

The Congressional Record is delivered daily to lawmakers on Capitol Hill. But at the end of each legislative session, the GPO, for reasons only it knows, puts together the records from that session into a 30-volume set, binds them in red cloth binders with fancy gold script lettering and presents sets to congressmen.

Each set, according to GPO figures, weighs in at 225 pounds and takes up six feet of shelf space. Senators get five complete sets each, which adds up to 30 feet of shelf space and 1,125 pounds worth. Clerks, sergeants-at-arms and doorkeepers rate two sets.

The GPO is three years behind in its billing and could not provide an exact cost of this program for 1972, and the taxpayers spent $1,703,298 that year to bind up these issues of the Record and present them to members of Congress, some of whom would then apparently give the, away to reap a tax break.

Today, with printing costs having escalated far beyond the 1972 prices, the cost to the taxpayer would be well over $2 million.

Food Firm Raises Price Of Its Coffee

New York (UPI) — General Foods Corp. Monday boosted wholesale prices by 30 cents a pound for ground coffees and 3 cents an ounce on its instant and freeze-dried brands following severe frost damage to Brazil's 1976 coffee crop.

The increases, which are effective immediately, affect retail packs of Maxwell House, Sanka, Brim, Yuban, Max-Pax and Maxim, a spokesman for General Foods in White Plains, N.Y., said.

In Lake Success, N.Y., Ehlers announced a 10-cent across-the-board increase in its coffee prices.

The increases were more sudden and higher than expected.

Last week some reports from Brazil said the worst cold wave in 50 years had destroyed between 70 and 80% of Brazil's 1.2 billion coffee trees, which produce one-third of the world's coffee.

In other business, the board approved incorporation of the Nebraska Association of Community College Trustees (NACCT) as a non-profit organization and SeTech's membership in it.

Board member Don Nielsen of Lincoln said the purpose of NACCT is to provide coordination and direction for the six community college areas, serve as an information clearinghouse, develop curriculum and promote the career education concept.

Those tasks were left dangling when LB344 abolished the state governing board and vested college operations in the local area boards.

Dues for NACCT membership, based on a flat fee plus charges for enrollment size, will vary from $5,000 to $10,000 annually, Nielsen said. Two SeTech board members will be appointed later to the initial 13-member NACCT board of directors.

Nielsen said NACCT can focus on the idea that "all jobs and all occupations are rewarding," whereas one community college area "cannot do it independently."

Rather than provide programs of "training and entertainment" for jobs that community college graduates can "dart in and out of," Nielsen said NACCT and local boards must "build the right kind of educational mechanism in order to deliver the kind of people we can use in business and industry."

Some state senators "don't completely understand the technical community college concept and operation," Nielsen said. And they are "spending money to provide a lot of (postsecondary) education services that are not needed," by overeducating students.

The result is a shortage of people to fill available jobs, he said. The vote to endorse NACCT was 7-1, with Kathy Brauer of Lincoln dissenting.

Food Firm Raises Price Of Its Coffee

New York (UPI) — General Foods Corp. Monday boosted wholesale prices by 30 cents a pound for ground coffees and 3 cents an ounce on its instant and freeze-dried brands following severe frost damage to Brazil's 1976 coffee crop.

The increases, which are effective immediately, affect retail packs of Maxwell House, Sanka, Brim, Yuban, Max-Pax and Maxim, a spokesman for General Foods in White Plains, N.Y., said.

In Lake Success, N.Y., Ehlers announced a 10-cent across-the-board increase in its coffee prices.

The increases were more sudden and higher than expected.

Last week some reports from Brazil said the worst cold wave in 50 years had destroyed between 70 and 80% of Brazil's 1.2 billion coffee trees, which produce one-third of the world's coffee.

Jailer Found Partially Nude

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A police officer testifying in the Joan Little murder trial said Monday he found jailer Clarence Alligood's partially nude body in a Beaufort County cell that had been occupied by the 21-year-old black woman.

Officer Jerry Helms of Washington, N.C., was the first witness called by the state as testimony began in Miss Little's two-week-old trial on a charge that she murdered the 62-year-old Alligood.

The state has contended that Alligood was killed during an escape attempt by Miss Little, who was awaiting an appeal on a breaking and entering conviction. Miss Little has said she killed Alligood, a white, in self-defense to ward off a sexual attack.

The trial is in Wake County Superior Court before Judge Hamilton Hobgood, who was assigned to the case after it was transferred from Beaufort County last spring.

Helms testified that he and another officer, Johnny Rose, discovered Alligood when they took another female prisoner to the jail. Alligood's body was on the bunk in what had been Miss Little's cell, he said.

"Mr. Alligood was lying on his left side. He was naked from the waist down, except for his socks," Helms said.

Helms testified that Alligood was holding his slacks in his left hand and an icepick in his right hand. A medical report released after the slaying indicated that Alligood had been stabbed 11 times with an icepick.

The officers found a set of eyeglasses and a pair of men's undershorts on the floor beside the cell bunk, Helms said.

Helms, an eight-year veteran with the Washington Police Department, said it was the first time he had participated in a murder investigation.

Rose, a member of the force for four years, agreed with Helms' testimony. After a quick examination of the body, Rose said he released his prisoner—a woman arrested for drunkenness—and returned to his patrol car to look for Miss Little.

An overnight adjournment was called when the state completed its questioning of Rose, who was told to return for cross-examination Tuesday.

Alligood's two sons and two daughters were in the courtroom Monday for the start of testimony. His widow did not attend.

Another spectator was Julian Bond, president of the Southern Law Poverty Center in Montgomery, Ala., which sponsored a nationwide fund-raising drive to help finance Miss Little's defense. The case also has attracted the attention of civil rights and women's rights organizations.

Hobgood ruled Monday that the state could not use as evidence Miss Little's health, social services and correctional record. He said the records "contained privileged and irrelevant information."

Hobgood also denied a defense motion for dismissal of the indictment on the grounds that the prosecution had reneged on an alleged agreement to drop the charge if Miss Little passed a lie detector test. Hobgood said there was no evidence of a binding agreement nor was there competent evidence before the court that showed "conclusively" that she is innocent of the charges now lodged against her.

The defense team, which includes seven attorneys, had submitted a motion stating that Miss Little successfully passed lie detector tests given by private operators in McLean, Va., and Chicago last month.

Hobgood also rejected a defense motion that would have allowed Miss Little to serve as her own legal counsel, but said she could take the stand to address the jury if she chooses.

The court delayed its ruling on another motion that would prohibit the use of a diary Miss Little left in her cell.

MISS LITTLE . . . says prosecution is 'like wolves.' Bond's at right.

Voting Bill Sent To Ford

Washington (AP)—Congress completed and sent to President Ford on Monday a bill extending sections of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 for seven more years and expanding it to provide bilingual help.

Winning Congress's final approval in the House by a vote of 346-56, the bill extends special enforcement of voting rights in seven Southern states and portions of 10 other states until 1982.

It also extends the act for the first time to cover areas in 24 states where Spanish, Asian languages and Indian and Alaskan dialects are spoken by large groups of voters.

Three Vote Yes

Washington (AP) — Nebraska Republican Reps. Charles Thone, Virginia Smith and John McCollister voted for the voting rights bill.

Brooke Says Blacks Still Live In Depression

Atlanta (UPI) — Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., said Monday the Great Depression of the 1930s never really ended for blacks and called for a $10 billion program to make the federal government "an employer of last resort."

"Poverty hits blacks disproportionately," he told the National Urban League. "While blacks represent slightly more than 10% of all persons in the nation, they comprise about 30% of all Americans who live in poverty."

Brooke, the only black member of the Senate, said black unemployment is 25.8% and 41% among black teenagers. Black workers often hold menial jobs, he said, averaging 58% of the earnings of the average white employee.

He said even during the economic boom of the 1960s "the black unemployment rate at its best never equaled the white unemployment rate at its worst."

Brooke said Americans "can no longer glorify the work ethic" or look down on those who are involuntarily unemployed. He said the unemployed are entitled to more than a "subexistence" on welfare.

"It is past time for the government to step in to provide jobs when the private sector is unable to do so," said Brooke. "The cost of having the government act as an employer of last resort would not be as great as many suppose."

"The costs of funding a net total of one million public service jobs would be $10 billion," he said.

Brooke said the buying power and government administrative needs generated by those paychecks would create an additional one million jobs.

"The $10 billion cost would be offset by a saving of at least $1 billion in unemployment benefits and by an additional $4 billion in federal tax revenues," said Brooke. "Thus, the direct costs to the government would be reduced by at least 50%, even before the reduction of costs involved in other government programs affecting the unemployed were calculated."

Brooke said restrictions on welfare eligibility and conditions on what payments may be used for have hampered the current public-assistance system.

Irving Probably Only Duckling Who Walks With Artificial Leg

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Irving the Drake is probably the only duckling in Oklahoma who swims, walks and even scratches with the aid of an artificial leg and foot.

Barely out of the egg, Irving swam into the jaws of a large snapping turtle that clamped down on his left foot.

Luckily for Irving, he happened to be hatched on a small lake behind an apartment complex where two men live, work and watch after the fowl inhabiting the water.

Chris Swartz, a young maintenance employee, shot the turtle with his bow and arrow, with a line attached for retrieval.

Ray Parham, head maintenance man, grabbed the white duckling out of the water only to find the bird's foot mangled so badly it was past saving.

Using knowledge acquired over the years from working with animals, Parham amputated the foot below the main joint and stitched up the wound. He kept the youngster in a cage while the leg healed and Parham made sure circulation was restored.

Irving learned to stand on his only foot, but he couldn't walk well or navigate in the water without traveling in circles.

That's when Parham got the idea to manufacture an artificial foot for the bird.

He thought first of molding a webbed foot to match the other, but dropped that in favor of a rubber tube, formed and splayed at the base to let Irving direct and propel himself through the water.

The foot was attached by bands below and above the joint, with nylon strings holding them together.

Irving stood shakily at first. But he quickly found the leg and foot were stable and began to walk like other ducks.

After a few trial waddles, he learned to use the foot for swimming and can paddle as straight as his peers with two real feet.

He is now beginning to use the artificial leg and foot to scratch and preen.

Missile Sale To Jordan Dropped

Washington — Facing overwhelming opposition in Congress, the Ford administration Monday suspended plans to sell 14 batteries of Hawk antiaircraft missiles to Jordan. Congress has opposed the sale on the ground that the 14 batteries — with six missile launchers to a battery — gave Jordan an offensive capability against Israel and was more than Jordan needed for its air defense. The State Department told Congress it still proposes the sale of 14 batteries, but key legislators believe that when a new proposal is submitted for action in September it would for the sale of substantially fewer batteries.

U.S. Bases In Turkey Taken; Ford Urges House Reconsider

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkish military commanders moved in Monday and took control of five U.S. bases concerned primarily with intelligence-gathering, and President Ford urged the U.S. House to reconsider its refusal to lift the congressional arms embargo against Turkey.

"My responsibility for the national security and conduct of foreign affairs have led me to urge in the strongest terms that the House lift the embargo," Ford said in a letter to House Speaker Carl Albert.

The President said it would be difficult to overstate the importance of the military bases "we will lose in Turkey" if the House refusal to renew the arms sales is not remedied. "These installations are not replaceable," he said.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Ankara announcing the takeover of the five bases, said 20 more installations would be taken over Tuesday.

In Washington, a U.S. State Department spokesman confirmed that all American military activities in Turkey have been suspended but said the Turkish government had not asked for the removal of U.S. personnel.

Turkey also stopped importing fuel for American military jets, the Ministry of Customs announced. Two squadrons of phantom jets are stationed at the Incirlik base.

The takeover, in reprisal for the U.S. House of Representatives' refusal to ease an arms embargo against Turkey imposed after its invasion of Cyprus, affected three major bases Monday. They are Karamursel, southeast of Istanbul, and two radar bases at Sinop on the Black Sea coast and Pirincliik near the southeastern town of Diyarbakir.

The two other bases were identified as Belbasi, near Ankara, and Kargaburun, near the Black Sea coast.

The State Department spokesman in Washington, Robert Anderson, told a news conference the United States does not agree with the Turkish view that the 1969 defense agreement between the two countries has lost its validity because of the House vote.

"In our view, the 1969 agreement remains in effect until renegotiated," said Anderson.

Greek Cypriot Killed By Turks

Nicosia, Cyprus (UPI) — Turkish troops opened up with automatic weapons fire along the cease-fire line in Nicosia Monday, killing a Greek Cypriot in the first outbreak of fatal violence on Cyprus in nearly four months, a government communique said.

Greek Cypriot officials said the Cyprus National Guard was placed on the highest alert but ordered not to shoot unless attacked.

A government communique said 50-year-old Andreas Georgiou of Livadhia was shot after he entered a carpenter's workshop near the "green line," the true line in Nicosia dividing Turkish and Greek sectors.

The communique said the Turks fired automatic weapons from a position behind the shop. Georgiou was critically wounded and died on the way to the hospital.

There was no immediate explanation offered by the Turkish side for the shooting.

The shooting came as President Archbishop Makarios flew to Helsinki for the European Security Conference summit. It also came three days before Greek and Turkish Cypriot leaders were to meet in Vienna for peace talks under the auspices of U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

Military Aid To Peru Restricted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has placed sharp restrictions in recent months on military aid to Peru, following a congressionally imposed ban on arms aid to neighboring Chile, informed sources said.

The goal, according to informants, is to avoid creating a power imbalance between the two South American countries.

One example of the new policy was reported administration rejection of a Peruvian request to purchase a missile system.

The type of system was not specified.

Washington is said to have rejected outright or reported to delaying tactics on other Peruvian requests for advanced war material.

The administration was aware that restrictions on arms credit sales to Peru could damage relations with that country, but it decided that the need for a power equilibrium in the area deserved a higher priority.

Senate Finance Panel Moves To Collect Excess Oil Profits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anticipating that all oil-price controls will end in five weeks, the Senate Finance Committee approved legislation Monday to soak up windfall oil profits and return them to consumers.

By a 10-2 vote, the committee agreed to an excess-profits tax and Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., said he hopes Congress will complete action on the measure before starting a month-long vacation on Saturday.

The committee will attempt to determine Tuesday how the billions to be taxed away from the oil companies will be rebated to U.S. consumers.

Approval of the windfall-profits tax came quickly after the committee set aside an energy-tax bill on which it had been working for three weeks.

Under the committee's proposal, the government would tax away 90% of the profit accruing to the oil companies as a result of the removal of price controls. However, the companies would be allowed to avoid a portion of the tax by reinvesting a greater share of the windfall in the search for more oil and gas.

Congressional tax experts estimate that if price controls expire as scheduled on Aug. 31, the oil industry stands to gain $18 billion in unexpected income.

The first $1 billion would go to the states in mineral taxes. Under a complex formula in the committee plan, the federal government would take an estimated $12.6 billion in 1976. The oil industry would be expected to escape $2.8 billion of windfall taxes by "plowing back" or reinvesting the windfall in energy development.

The amount of oil subject to the windfall tax would decline by 1.4% a month until the tax expired in 1981.

Hijacker Foiled

Tokyo (UPI)—An unarmed 17-year-old high school student hijacked a Japanese jetliner carrying 286 persons on a domestic flight "on the spur of the moment" Monday and ordered it flown to Hawaii or Okinawa.

Instead, the pilot landed in Tokyo, where security guards disguised as airlines employees overpowered the youth. Nobody was hurt.

New Satellite Spy-In-The-Sky

Hong Kong (UPI) — Intelligence sources specializing in Chinese affairs said Monday the satellite launched Saturday by China is believed to be Peking's first spy-in-the-sky spacecraft. Peking announcements said only that it is circling the globe every 91 minutes and "working properly."

The trajectory of the satellite took it over almost 2,000 miles of territory in the central part of the Soviet Union, including the island of Novaya Zemlya, a major Soviet nuclear testing area.

It also crossed over part of Outer Mongolia, where large numbers of Soviet troops and missiles are reported to be stationed as part of the force protecting the disputed Sino-Soviet border.

Isaac Asimov Predicts Meteor 'Space Patrols'

RENSSELAERVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Dr. Isaac Asimov says one possible result of America's years of space exploration could be the creation of a "space patrol" to protect the earth from huge meteorites and other debris from outer space.

Asimov, a well-known lecturer and author of science fiction, noted that in this century alone two large meteorites have crashed into desolate areas of Siberia. "The chances are even that within 500 years a city on earth will be hit by a meteorite," he said.

Asimov said the "space patrol" would protect against such a catastrophe by using a device to blast a meteorite into pebbles before it hit earth. "Instead of really getting clobbered, we'd get a beautiful meteor shower," he said.

Asimov spoke Sunday at the start of "A Week With Isaac Asimov" seminar at the Institute on Man and Science.

Arraignment Set Today For Eagle

Rapid City, S.D. (AP) — James Theodore Eagle, 19, will be arraigned Tuesday in Rapid City before U.S. Magistrate James Wilson on two counts of murder.

Eagle, a resident of Wyoming's Wind River Reservation, is charged in the June 26 shooting deaths of FBI agents Ronald Williams and Jack Coler on South Dakota's Pine Ridge Indian Reservation.

Eagle had been scheduled for arraignment Monday, but Wilson postponed the arraignment one day to allow attorneys to decide who would represent Eagle.

Jailer Found Partially Nude

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A police officer testifying in the Joan Little murder trial said Monday he found jailer Clarence Alligood's partially nude body in a Beaufort County cell that had been occupied by the 21-year-old black woman.

Officer Jerry Helms of Washington, N.C., was the first witness called by the state as testimony began in Miss Little's two-week-old trial on a charge that she murdered the 62-year-old Alligood.

The state has contended that Alligood was killed during an escape attempt by Miss Little, who was awaiting an appeal on a breaking and entering conviction. Miss Little has said she killed Alligood, a white, in self-defense to ward off a sexual attack.

The trial is in Wake County Superior Court before Judge Hamilton Hobgood, who was assigned to the case after it was transferred from Beaufort County last spring.

Helms testified that he and another officer, Johnny Rose, discovered Alligood when they took another female prisoner to the jail. Alligood's body was in the bunk in what had been Miss Little's cell, he said.

"Mr. Alligood was lying on his left side. He was naked from the waist down, except for his socks," Helms said.

Revised Lawyer Rules To Be Effective Sept. 1

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Revised disciplinary rules aimed at improving the Nebraska State Bar Association's ability to police the state's 3,021 lawyers become effective Sept. 1.

The rules, the fruit of an effort initiated in 1972, will increase public involvement in the disciplinary procedure, speed up the often time-consuming process, polish the bar's investigative ability and ensure due process, according to bar association spokesmen.

Nebraska Supreme Court Chief Justice Paul White and Jack W. Marer, an Omaha attorney who drafted the rules, said at a press conference Monday the changes should put the Nebraska bar in the vanguard of efforts to upgrade discipline of lawyers.

Complaints Swell

The changes, the first in 37 years, were brought about at least partially by the increased number of complaints being filed against lawyers, the shadow cast upon the profession by the Watergate scandal and efforts in the Unicameral to abolish mandatory membership in the bar for all practicing attorneys.

One area which the new rules do not change is that complaints filed with the bar will remain confidential until the committees on inquiry and the bar's advisory committee have filed them with the supreme court.

In fact, Robert C. Clair, the bar's full-time counsel on discipline, refused to say how many complaints are filed annually on the grounds it is privileged information.

Attorneys Protected

Blair said such information remains confidential to protect attorneys' reputations from unmerited complaints.

So far this year, the court, which acts as the final judge for complaints, has suspended three attorneys.

Among the changes in the rules are the following:

- The investigation of all complaints has been assigned to the counsel for discipline and his staff. Previously, the foot work was done by lawyers serving without pay on committees of inquiry.
- Marer said this change should speed up and improve the quality of investigations.

Retired Albion Newsman May Run Against Smith

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Retired Albion newspaperman Jack Lough Monday said he may challenge Congresswoman Virginia Smith in next year's Third District Republican congressional primary contest.

"I won't decide for sure until I see who else is in the field," Lough said in a telephone interview.

"It will depend on what develops in both parties."

"But if no one else gets into it, I'll be in there for sure."

Jack Lough

Having survived both the 1974 GOP primary and the general election by the slenderest of margins, Mrs. Smith would appear to be the most vulnerable member of Nebraska's congressional delegation.

Winning but one of every five Republican votes, she captured the GOP nomination in the primary with 21% of the vote and a 141-vote victory over Don Blank of McCook.

Last November, she won slightly over 50% of the general election votes in nipping Democratic nominee Wayne Ziebarth by 737 ballots.

Conscious of the role that seniority plays in terms of congressional power and influence, Lough said his age would concern him in a contest with someone other than Mrs. Smith.

Lough would be 66 when he took office in 1977.

But, he noted, he is "only a few months older than the incumbent."

Mrs. Smith celebrated her 64th birthday last month.

A newspaperman for 52 years, Lough worked as a member of former Congressman Dave Martin's staff in Washington for 8½ months last year.

Martin retired in January, and Mrs. Smith became the representative of western and central Nebraska's vast Third District. Lough worked in her campaign.

If he decides to pursue the post himself next year, Lough said, one of his major campaign concerns would be deficit spending and the national debt.

"Candidates who think they are talking fiscal responsibility by merely balancing the federal — Two lay members will be added to the advisory committee by the supreme court; however, they will not participate in preparing legal opinions.

Marer said in the future lay members may also be added to the local committees on inquiry.

No Retaliation

— People filing complaints will have immunity from liability. Marer said this provision ensures that people can file complaints without fear of retaliation.

— The court may enlarge or appoint an entirely new committee on inquiry when conflicts of interest or personal friendships make it difficult to fairly investigate a complaint.

Such situations have occurred, it was indicated, particularly in rural areas prompting complaints that the committees on inquiry are hesitant to act.

The report said, "as a result, complaints have not been disposed of with promptness and absolute fairness."

— The court may temporarily suspend an attorney in cases of incompetence or incapacity.

Notice Of Appeal

— Notice will also be given to the complainant and the lawyer that he or she can appeal any action by the counsel on discipline, the committee on inquiry or the advisory committee to the court.

The cost of the disciplinary proceedings including transcripts, depositions and witness fees will be borne by the bar through its $23 disciplinary assessment to each lawyer in the state. (Marer said in the future that will have to be raised.)

— The committee on inquiry can issue written reprimands if it feels that is the only action warranted.

Charles F. Adams, a former state bar president, noted that although more complaints are being filed it doesn't mean more lawyers are being dishonest. Often, he said, an attorney has acted ethically and to the best of his ability but loses the case. The client is unhappy and files a complaint.

William J. Baird, chairman of the bar's advisory committee, said the revisions are needed because in 37 years concepts of ethics have changed.

City Campaign Charge Faced By Cannon, YAF

By United Press International

The Nebraska Young Americans for Freedom and its chairman, Terrell R. Cannon, will be arraigned Friday in Municipal Court for failing to file campaign finance reports during last May's municipal elections.

The group circulated a flier during the week preceding the May 6 election, connecting City Council candidate Steve Tiwald with radical and pro-abortion groups.

State and city ordinances define a political committee as a group of two or more persons which "raises or expends money in promoting or preventing the nomination or election of any candidate."

Norman Langemach, the chief city prosecutor, said YAF failed to file campaign finance reports with the city. The action came after Common Cause, a lobbying group, asked Langemach's office to investigate YAF.

The misdemeanor carries a penalty of not less than $100 and not more than $500.

Last week Tiwald filed a $100,000 libel suit against the Nebraska Coalition Against Abortion, YAF, Cannon and the conservative publication Choice, which is published by Cannon.

Tiwald contended the statements made about him in the flier and in Choice were libelous and defamatory.

Senate OKs Bigger Base

Washington (UPI)—The Senate voted Monday to continue expanding the U.S. naval facility on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia, rejecting Democratic leader Mike Mansfield's warning that this might draw the United States into a "new and dramatic adventure in South Asia."

After more than five hours of spirited debate, the Senate defeated, 53 to 43, a resolution by Mansfield, D-Mont., to block $18.1 million in fiscal 1975 funds, and an anticipated $13.8 million for 1976, for enlarging the installation.

Nebraska Republican Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska voted with the majority.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, argued that the Soviet fleet, increasingly active in the Indian Ocean, poses a potential threat to oil and the United States.

Socialist Plan Offered

•The New York Times

Lisbon — Portugal's Socialist leader Mario Soares presented Monday a plan for a democratic alternative to the newly formed military triumvirate in a move to solve the country's deepening political, social and economic crises.

The Socialist party is ready to open negotiations with representatives of the Armed Forces Movement and the two other main political parties, the centrist Popular Democrats and the Communist Party to set up a coalition government around a common platform, Soares declared.

The Socialist Party secretary general called for "national reconciliation" at a crowded press conference in a downtown hotel, 18 days after he led his party out of the government on charges that the premier, Gen. Vasco dos Santos Goncalves, was preparing the Communist takeover of the country.

Goncalves has tried to form a new cabinet but the Socialists and the Popular Democrats, which together won 64% of the vote in April's election, have refused to participate.

Meanwhile a government spokesman said President Francisco da Costa Gomes would delay his departure for the European Security Conference at Helsinki for 48 hours, apparently in connection with the current political crisis. Foreign Minister Gen. Ernesto Melo Antunes, who was supposed to accompany the president to Helsinki, is known to oppose the triumvirate and is rumored to have resigned.

Soares reaffirmed his party's opposition to Goncalves and to the three-man military junta, announced last Friday, which includes the Costa Gomes, Goncalves and Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, the security chief.

Revised Lawyer Rules To Be Effective Sept. 1

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Revised disciplinary rules aimed at improving the Nebraska State Bar Association's ability to police the state's 3,021 lawyers become effective Sept. 1.

The rules, the fruit of an effort initiated in 1972, will increase public involvement in the disciplinary procedure, speed up the often time-consuming process, polish the bar's investigative ability and ensure due process, according to bar association spokesmen.

Nebraska Supreme Court Chief Justice Paul White and Jack W. Marer, an Omaha attorney who drafted the rules, said at a press conference Monday the changes should put the Nebraska bar in the vanguard of efforts to upgrade discipline of lawyers.

Retired Albion newspaperman Jack Lough Monday said he may challenge Congresswoman Virginia Smith in next year's Third District Republican congressional primary contest.

"I won't decide for sure until I see who else is in the field," Lough said in a telephone interview.

"It will depend on what develops in both parties. But if no one else gets into it, I'll be in there for sure."

Government is competing against private enterprise for capital, Lough said, and the result is higher interest rates and more inflation.

Federal Priorities Whacky

Disbelief and anger were the expected reactions in Nebraska to the sudden opposition by the Ford administration to legislation in Congress seeking to protect cattle-raisers against faulty meat-packing buyers. The purpose of the bill was to insure bonding by packers to guarantee the validity of checks given by them for cattle from the ranchers.

Incentive for such a requirement comes from the recent experience of cattlemen who were left holding no-account checks from American Beef Packers of Omaha. Nebraska cattlemen lost millions of dollars in that economic disaster.

The administration reported that it would not support the bonding requirement because such was not in harmony with the new emphasis on deregulation by the federal government of various national affairs. That is a little like saying you won't interfere in the affairs of a drowning man by throwing him a life preserver.

It is a ludicrous situation when you think about all the unwanted meddling the federal government does. For instance, it has been only in the face of strenuous opposition that the Corps of Engineers has backed down, tentatively, in its ill-advised scheme to classify the Platte and other rivers in the state as navigable streams for the purpose of imposing federal regulations upon those streams.

Motorcyclists in Nebraska say they are going to court to seek to overturn a law requiring them to wear helmets when riding their bikes. That law is a direct result of federal insistence.

The helmet law, an ambulance regulatory law, the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit and a lot of other things come as the result of threats by the federal government to cut off Nebraska's highway aid funds if the laws are not enacted and enforced. Nebraska's Interstate Highway information signs had to be taken down as a result of another federal regulation.

We can appreciate and even applaud curtailment of federal government's efforts to impose itself upon the states and the citizenry but only when done with reason and logic. It would be even better yet if the deregulation efforts were accompanied by an equal effort to bring federal spending into proper balance.

But to simply pick out agriculture while everything else goes on its merry way is a procedure we can't buy. The bonding requirement for packers has a lot more merit than many federal schemes that Uncle Sam has no intention of abandoning.

Crime Defies Solution

The concern of President Ford and the citizens of the nation with the continuing rise in crime is easy to understand. In a recent Gallup poll, it was shown that nearly half the American people are afraid to walk in their neighborhoods at night.

Additionally, one in five persons fears for his safety even within the confines of his own home.

The most disturbing thing of all is that there is no answer to this in the offing. The political system of the nation has tried to deal with the rising crime rate but to little real avail. About the best we can say is that things might be even worse were it not for the efforts that have been made.

Obviously, the solution does not lie in the area of enforcement. Enforcement and punishment surely are vital to our security against crime but they offer no real guarantee.

Perhaps if they could reach the point of saturation, they would produce better results than they do but that is both theoretical and impractical. It is highly unlikely that we could ever afford the law-enforcement and judicial system that would guarantee just and adequate punishment for each and every crime.

Somewhere deep within our social fabric lies the answer, if there is one. Some forms of crime are simply a reflection of man's inherent human weakness but violent crimes, crimes against the person, are more a reflection of our imperfect social order.

That social order relates, of course, to our political and economic system and, indeed, may even be an adjunct of the latter. It is in the seeming inability of the political and economic system to effectively alter its basic structure that we experience such things as a crime rate that defies solution.

Our real hangup has been the fact that we've been unable to remove the causes of crime, the circumstances that motivate those who seek to live as parasites among the rest of us. Surely, crime is not the kind of life that one would voluntarily choose if other options were readily open to him.

But crime will be with us, and probably at an increasing rate, until such time as we have managed to provide for the potential criminal an alternative and productive way of life that is within his grasp. And that means far more enlightened leadership in politics and economics than we have come close to providing to date.

WASHINGTON — The race for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination is the most crowded field in either party in recent history. Nine men are actively seeking the nomination and another three are under serious consideration by party leaders.

The conventional wisdom is that the three candidates who are not running — Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, Hubert H. Humphrey, and Edmund S. Muskie — have the best chance of success because there will be a brokered convention.

But history suggests a note of caution. Brokered conventions were a 19th century phenomenon. There have been only two in the last half-century, the Democrats nominating John W. Davis in 1924 and Adlai E. Stevenson in 1952. Otherwise, both parties have chosen the obvious front-runner. The primaries next spring will probably produce such a leading candidate once again.

If there is a brokered convention, however, Kennedy would be a 2-to-1 favorite. Indeed, odds in his case are unreal. The pressure on him to accept would be intense.

KINGSBURY SMITH

JERUSALEM — In the negotiations now underway for an interim agreement with Egypt, Israel is proving its willingness to take great risks for peace.

It is offering to give up oil fields on which it depends for 60% of its consumption needs. It is also offering to withdraw its military forces within the strategic Mitla and Gidi passes to less advantageous lines.

Progress has been made in these negotiations but certain issues still remain to be settled.

A new interim agreement with Egypt is the best way to maintain the momentum of peace efforts in the Middle East because the neighboring Arab countries are not ready to conclude a final peace treaty on terms acceptable to Israel. These points were made by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in an exclusive interview with William Randolph Hearst Jr., editor-in-chief of the Hearst Newspapers, and the writer.

The former ambassador to the United States and general who led Israel to victory in the 1967 Six-Day War received us at a crucial stage in the negotiations which some observers believe are likely to end in agreement.

Premier Rabin said that during his meeting with Secretary Kissinger he had the impression some progress had been made towards achievement of the interim agreement. "More than that," he added,

In a deadlocked convention, I would rate Humphrey's chances at 4-to-1 and Muskie's at 5-to-1. Humphrey has the disadvantage of being the more battle-scarred and familiar. But many politicians who signed up with Muskie four years ago and went down with him believe he showed an inept touch when the going got tough in the early primaries. By contrast, they remember favorably Humphrey's come-from-behind campaign in 1968 that nearly caught Richard Nixon at the wire.

Of the nine active candidates, George C. Wallace can be ruled off the board. In the unlikely event he is the nominee, the Democrats would split and the liberals nominate a candidate of their own.

Sen. Henry Jackson is the early favorite. But in my view, his chances are no better than 10-to-1. Jackson is a shrewd, effective, serious-minded legislator. Even his enemies usually concede that he would make a competent president. The trouble is he has too many enemies. Those who distrust him as a defender of the Vietnam war, of big military budgets, and of a hard line in foreign affairs are numerous enough to veto his nomination. Only a brilliant showing in the primaries would enable him to overpower his enemies, but as a campaigner he is dull. One of his Senate colleagues has remarked, "Why, you can fall asleep while shaking hands with Scoop."

If Jackson fades in the primaries, any one of the three candidates is well-positioned to break through. They are Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana, Former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, and Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona. I would rate the chances of each of them at 8-to-1.

Bayh, a good orator and a resilient campaigner, has excellent relationships with organized labor. Udall has a Will Rogers candor and humor that are attractive, and he has the advantage of a strong identification with the environmental issue.

Carter is almost unknown, but he impresses small audiences with his charm and his skill in defining and developing issues.

The Democratic Party, having once been the home of the "Solid South" and then having lost most of its support there in national elections, is now politically and psychologically prepared to nominate a southerner.

Three other candidates — former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, and Sargent Shriver — have qualities and experience comparable to the Bayh-Udall-Carter group but their chances for various reasons are much poorer. I rate them 50-to-1.

Sanford, an excellent public servant and of presidential quality, is politically crippled by his defeat in his own state in 1972 by George C. Wallace. Until he slays that dragon in next year's North Carolina primary, he has to be judged a longshot.

Harris' style strikes me as too "hot," to revivalist to appeal to the urban voters who are the core of Democratic strength. But if it is true that George C. Wallace really exploits economic dissatisfactions and that those dissatisfactions are separable from his basic appeal as a racist, two propositions that I disbelieve, then Harris — a genuine, non-racist populist — is the right man to put those theories to the test.

Shriver is an exceptionally attractive public figure. But his vice-presidential campaign in 1972 did little to rescue the McGovern shambles or to establish his own political reputation. Shriver remains an unproven quantity.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is a 100-to-1 shot. Despite astute efforts to create a centrist image, this suave, handsome spokesman of the Texas financial establishment is perceived by labor, blacks, and other Democratic interest groups as too conservative.

But since the head of the ticket is sure to be a liberal, Bentsen is an excellent prospect for vice-president. Indeed, there are those who believe his real goal is to follow Lyndon Johnson's 1960 route and enter national office as the running-mate of Kennedy.

peace treaty on terms acceptable to Israel.

These points were made by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in an exclusive interview with William Randolph Hearst Jr., editor-in-chief of the Hearst Newspapers, and the writer.

The former ambassador to the United States and general who led Israel to victory in the 1967 Six-Day War received us at a crucial stage in the negotiations which some observers believe are likely to end in agreement.

Premier Rabin said that during his meeting with Secretary Kissinger he had the impression some progress had been made towards achievement of the interim agreement. "More than that," he added,

"I believe we have reached an understanding on the sequence of events that have to be taken to make it work carefully and successfully."

However, the Israeli leader was obviously perturbed by the Egyptian government's announcement that it was not going to ask for renewal of the mandate for the U.N. peace-keeping force in the Sinai. The mandate expires soon, although Cairo reports indicated Egypt would leave it up to the U.N. Security Council to tackle the fate of the force. It seems highly unlikely it will actually be withdrawn since this would undoubtedly wreck the chances of a new interim agreement.

Premier Rabin said he had learned that in the middle of negotiations about an agreement between the Arabs and Israel, one should be very careful about predicting their outcome, or when they were likely to be concluded. He pointed out the negotiations were not being held directly because the Arabs refuse to sit at the same negotiating table with Israel. The negotiations are being carried on through a third party — the United States — and that takes time.

"It is strange they complain about the slowness of the negotiations when they decided on the procedure that practically heads to prolongation," he added.

Asked what concrete U.S. commitments to Israel he considered necessary in connection with an interim agreement, the Premier said:

"I believe what we should ask the United States is that once an interim agreement is reached, we should first of all work together on the question of an overall settlement. We shall try to see what is possible with Syria first. Then possibly with Jordan but in the context of an overall settlement."

"Secondly, these efforts will not bring results unless the interim agreement stands for several years."

"Also, there should be no misunderstanding between the United States and Israel, and no reassessment of American policy that would affect U.S. support of Israel in terms of supplying arms and financial aid."

NEW YORK — Maybe President Ford's new "compromise" proposal on oil price decontrol over a 39-month period, together with a gradually rising price ceiling, will break the deadlock that has developed between him and the Democratic Congress on energy policy. But the first reaction of the Democrats is not promising, since many see the Ford proposal as both inflationary and ineffective.

But the Democrats themselves offer even less. The House having so far defaulted on the energy problem, particularly on the question of an increase in the federal gasoline tax, the Senate Finance Committee now appears to be on the same road to nowhere.

Its proposal for stiff new taxes on gas-guzzling cars not only runs squarely into the danger of sacrificing jobs in the hard-pressed auto industry; it is also a proposal that already has been defeated in the House.

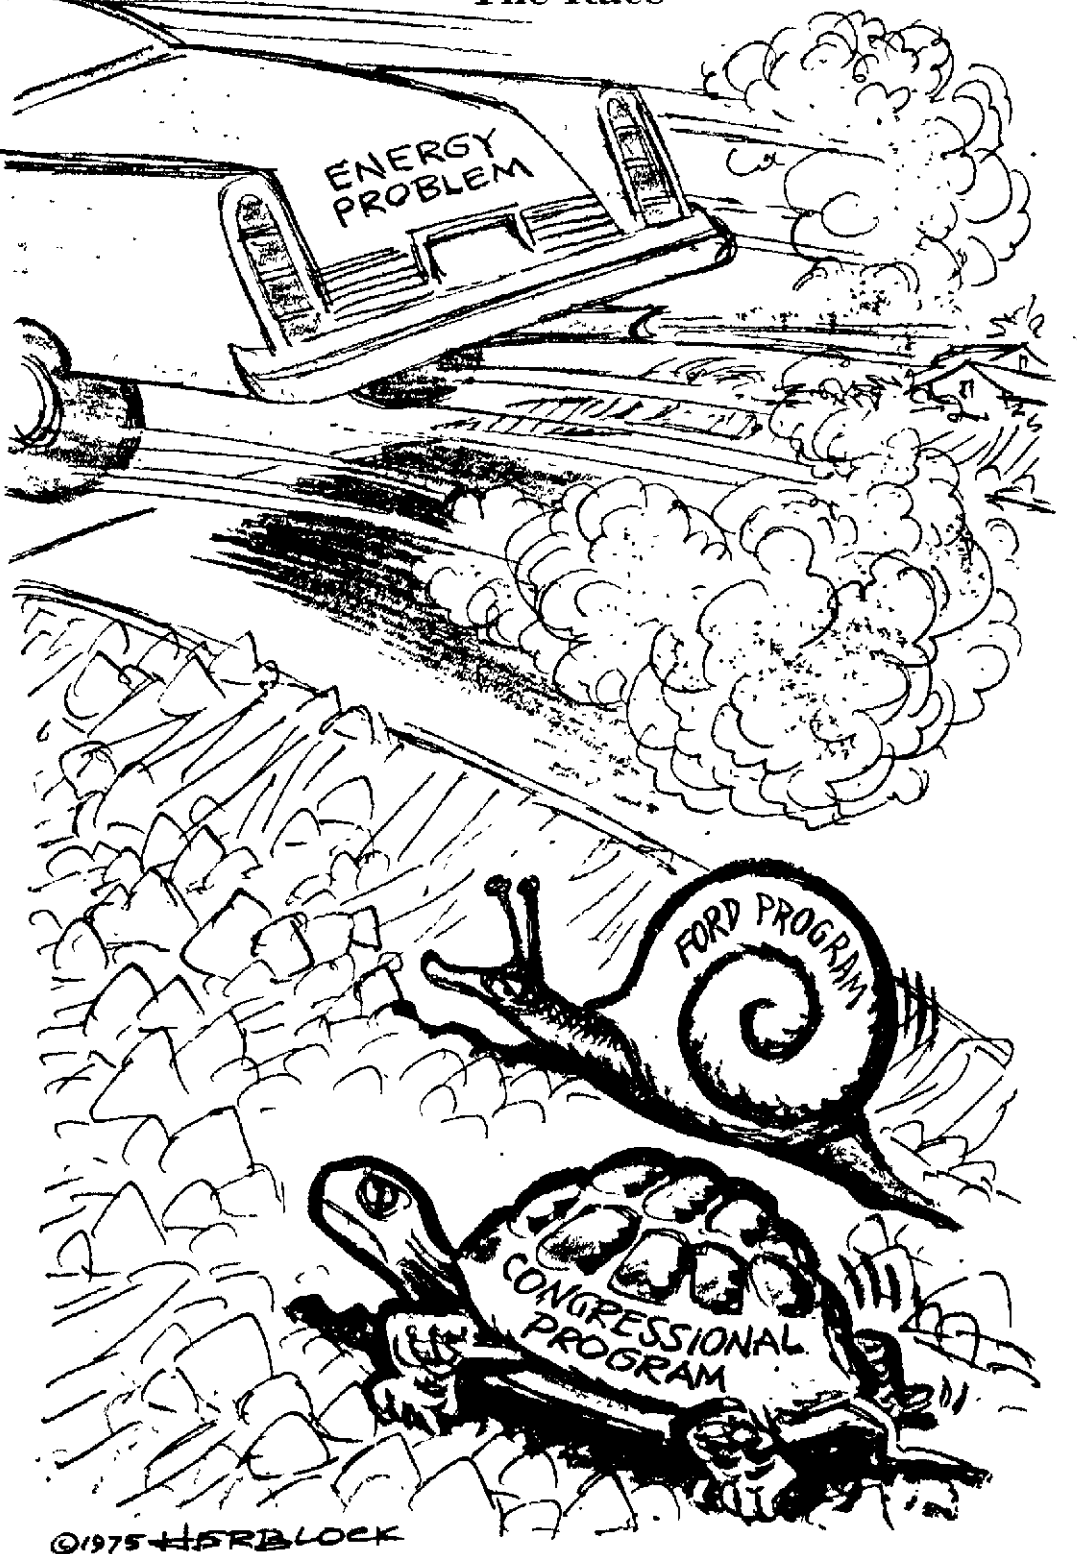

The floundering in Washington on what ought to be considered one of the major problems facing the country may reflect public indifference. A Gallup poll taken last spring showed that the memory of the gasoline shortage of 1973-74 had faded and that less than half of those sampled believed there was any such thing as an energy crisis.

This is mindless optimism. Aside from the immediate prospect that the oil-producing nations might raise oil prices again, and that political disputes in the Middle East could bring on a new embargo on oil shipments to the United States, the long-term energy crisis is real, serious and not about to go away. Only a few pieces of evidence are needed to support that assertion:

—Forty per cent of the oil consumed in the United States is imported and thus subject to sharp price increases or embargo. New England supplies only 0.1% of its own energy needs, for example, while the New England-New York area meets 80% of its energy consumption with oil, most of which is imported.

An Energy Crisis That Is Real

The Race

—The National Academy of Sciences reports that it is "essentially impossible" for this country's oil production to rise enough in the next decade for the United States to achieve energy independence. There will never again be a large annual increase in the nation's production of gas and natural gas, according to the NAS report.

—The Atomic Energy Commission has revised its plans to introduce breeder reactors for nuclear power by the 1980's. That date has been pushed back to sometime in the 1990's. Development of breeder reactors has been slowed by several critical problems — the possibility that terrorists might be able to steal fissionable materials, the hazardous transportation of radioactive materials, the elimination of radioactive waste.

Because of these problems, Secretary of Commerce Rogers Morton and Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb have announced a cooling of interest on the part of the Ford administration in crash programs to develop breeder reactors.

—With the development of nuclear energy and possible energy independence far in the future, immediate crises could hurt badly. The oil embargo of 1973 was 100% effective, reducing the flow of oil into the country from the Middle East from 12.3 million barrels a day in September, 1973, to a bare 19,000 barrels a day through January and February, 1974.

—The nation already faces one serious shortage — of natural gas — with the start of the cold season only three months away. Although current reserves of oil are now at about 280 million barrels, a February inventory by the Federal Power Commission found that reserves of natural gas are far down.

On June 6, the FPC announced that natural gas utilities estimated they would fall 20% short of firm requirements over the next 12 months.

Even if satisfactory Middle East political arrangements, precluding another embargo, could be assumed, and even if imported oil at reasonable prices could be counted upon in the near future, the real energy crisis would remain. The "vast" Middle East oil reserves, at present and projected rates of consumption, will be entirely depleted in 30 years, the National Academy of Sciences has reported.

Worse, the NAS reports also that the estimated oil reserves of the entire world will be exhausted in 50 years, unless something is done soon to produce alternative sources of energy on a scale large enough to supply a major portion of the world's energy consumption — of which, that of the United States is a huge percentage.

Alternative sources of energy on that scale are not now in sight. For the foreseeable future the only feasible course is conservation, and the only sensible target is the vast amount of gasoline wasted daily in this country in the thirty tanks of millions of huge and inefficient automobiles. That is the central problem neither the President nor Congress seems willing to face.

The Pestery Levy

Lincoln, Neb. I see the Lincoln AA will not ask this year for the optional 0.1 mill "promotional fund" levy. Is it possible that the campaign waged by newly elected board member Don Geis was responsible for that blessed omission?

Is it possible that Geis' forthright question regarding the necessity for the levy was able to accomplish what a few concerned Lincoln office-holders have been unable to do in years past?

Bravo to the authority for eliminating this small but pestery levy at least for one year. The accrued balance should go a ways toward paying Washington lawyers' fees. Now, if we can just get the city attorney to represent the board here at home, we'll have something going.

Lincoln, Neb. We of the Yankee Hill Neighborhood Association would like to express our gratitude to all the people who aided us in our efforts to keep our community a safe place for our children to live and grow. Governor Exon has decided to heed our request to move the Penal Diagnostic-Evaluation Center to a site other than a residential area. We are aware of the time his staff took to investigate the pro's and con's of locating the center elsewhere, and think it speaks well of his administration's willingness to listen to the people's point of view.

We were helped by Senators Jerome Warner and Steve Fowler, the medical staff at Lincoln Regional Center, and people throughout the city who wrote letters in our favor to Governor Exon. To these people, we say a special thanks.

We hope that other neighborhood associations and other communities who are not organized can see the value of working together as a group. No one person could have accomplished this for us alone. We believe we have a right to say what goes on in our own neighborhoods, and in the way we are governed. We are proud of our community, our association, and we feel that our mutual interest has brought us closer together.

Taking Council For A Ride

Lincoln, Neb. This is regarding a not very old resurfacing of North 48th between Francis and Leighton Streets.

I invite our City Council to get into a car and take a ride over this stretch, particularly southbound in the curb lane. As they drive along, they might like to ponder these questions:

Who was the contractor?
Who was the inspector who approved the job?
I wouldn't have had an occasion to experience this street if I hadn't been detoured by all the repairs taking place on our city roadways.

Goah, I wonder why?

CONFUSE-US

Federal Priorities Whacky

Disbelief and anger were the expected reactions in Nebraska to the sudden opposition by the Ford administration to legislation in Congress seeking to protect cattle-raisers against faulty meat-packing buyers. The purpose of the bill was to insure bonding by packers to guarantee the validity of checks given by them for cattle from the ranchers.

Incentive for such a requirement comes from the recent experience of cattlemen who were left holding no-account checks from American Beef Packers of Omaha. Nebraska cattlemen lost millions of dollars in that economic disaster.

The administration reported that it would not support the bonding requirement because such was not in harmony with the new emphasis on deregulation by the federal government of various national affairs. That is a little like saying you won't interfere in the affairs of a drowning man by throwing him a life preserver.

It is a ludicrous situation when you think about all the unwanted meddling the federal government does. For instance, it has been only in the face of strenuous opposition that the Corps of Engineers has backed down, tentatively, in its ill-advised scheme to classify the Platte and other rivers in the state as navigable streams for the purpose of imposing federal regulations upon those streams.

Motorcyclists in Nebraska say they are going to court to seek to overturn a law requiring them to wear helmets when riding their bikes. That law is a direct result of federal insistence.

The helmet law, an ambulance regulatory law, the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit and a lot of other things come as the result of threats by the federal government to cut off Nebraska's highway aid funds if the laws are not enacted and enforced. Nebraska's Interstate Highway information signs had to be taken down as a result of another federal regulation.

We can appreciate and even applaud curtailment of federal government's efforts to impose itself upon the states and the citizenry but only when done with reason and logic. It would be even better yet if the deregulation efforts were accompanied by an equal effort to bring federal spending into proper balance.

But to simply pick out agriculture while everything else goes on its merry way is a procedure we can't buy. The bonding requirement for packers has a lot more merit than many federal schemes that Uncle Sam has no intention of abandoning.

Crime Defies Solution

The concern of President Ford and the citizens of the nation with the continuing rise in crime is easy to understand. In a recent Gallup poll, it was shown that nearly half the American people are afraid to walk in their neighborhoods at night.

Additionally, one in five persons fears for his safety even within the confines of his own home.

The most disturbing thing of all is that there is no answer to this in the offing. The political system of the nation has tried to deal with the rising crime rate but to little real avail. About the best we can say is that things might be even worse were it not for the efforts that have been made.

Obviously, the solution does not lie in the area of enforcement. Enforcement and punishment surely are vital to our security against crime but they offer no real guarantee.

Perhaps if they could reach the point of saturation, they would produce better results than they do but that is both theoretical and impractical. It is highly unlikely that we could ever afford the law-enforcement and judicial system that would guarantee just and adequate punishment for each and every crime.

Somewhere deep within our social fabric lies the answer, if there is one. Some forms of crime are simply a reflection of man's inherent human weakness but violent crimes, crimes against the person, are more a reflection of our imperfect social order.

That social order relates, of course, to our political and economic system and, indeed, may even be an adjunct of the latter. It is in the seeming inability of the political and economic system to effectively alter its basic structure that we experience such things as a crime rate that defies solution.

Our real hangup has been the fact that we've been unable to remove the causes of crime, the circumstances that motivate those who seek to live as parasites among the rest of us. Surely, crime is not the kind of life that one would voluntarily choose if other options were readily open to him.

But crime will be with us, and probably at an increasing rate, until such time as we have managed to provide for the potential criminal an alternative and productive way of life that is within his grasp. And that means far more enlightened leadership in politics and economics than we have come close to providing to date.

WASHINGTON — The race for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination is the most crowded field in either party in recent history. Nine men are actively seeking the nomination and another three are under serious consideration by party leaders.

The conventional wisdom is that the three candidates who are not running — Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, Hubert H. Humphrey, and Edmund S. Muskie — have the best chance of success because there will be a brokered convention.

But history suggests a note of caution. Brokered conventions were a 19th century phenomenon. There have been only two in the last half-century, the Democrats nominating John W. Davis in 1924 and Adlai E. Stevenson in 1952. Otherwise, both parties have chosen the obvious front-runner. The primaries next spring will probably produce such a leading candidate once again.

If there is a brokered convention, however, Kennedy would be a 2-to-5 favorite. Indeed, odds in his case are unreal. The pressure on him to accept would be intense.

JERUSALEM — In the negotiations now underway for an interim agreement with Egypt, Israel is proving its willingness to take great risks for peace.

It is offering to give up oil fields on which it depends for 60% of its consumption needs. It is also offering to withdraw its military forces within the strategic Mitla and Gidi passes to less advantageous lines.

Progress has been made in these negotiations but certain issues still remain to be settled.

A new interim agreement with Egypt is the best way to maintain the momentum of peace efforts in the Middle East because the neighboring Arab countries are not ready to conclude a final peace treaty on terms acceptable to Israel. These points were made by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in an exclusive interview with William Randolph Hearst Jr., editor-in-chief of the Hearst Newspapers, and the writer.

The former ambassador to the United States and general who led Israel to victory in the 1967 Six-Day War received us at a crucial stage in the negotiations which some observers believe are likely to end in agreement.

Premier Rabin said that during his meeting with Secretary Kissinger he had the impression some progress had been made towards achievement of the interim agreement. "More than that," he added,

"I believe we have reached an understanding on the sequence of events that have to be taken to make it work carefully and successfully."

However, the Israeli leader was obviously perturbed by the Egyptian government's announcement that it was not going to ask for renewal of the mandate for the U.N. peace-keeping force in the Sinai. The mandate expires soon, although Cairo reports indicated Egypt would leave it up to the U.N. Security Council to tackle the fate of the force. It seems highly unlikely it will actually be withdrawn since this would undoubtedly wreck the chances of a new interim agreement.

Premier Rabin said he had learned that in the middle of negotiations about an agreement between the Arabs and Israel, one should be very careful about predicting their outcome, or when they were likely to be concluded. He pointed out the negotiations were not being held directly because the Arabs refuse to sit at the same negotiating table with Israel. The negotiations are being carried on through a third party — the United States — and that takes time.

The Democratic Party, having once been the home of the "Solid South" and then having lost most of its support there in national elections, is now politically and psychologically prepared to nominate a southerner.

Three other candidates — former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, and Sargent Shriver — have qualities and experience comparable to the Bayh-Udall-Carter group but their chances for various reasons are much poorer. I rate them 50-to-1.

Sanford, an excellent public servant and of presidential quality, is politically crippled by his defeat in his own state in 1972 by George C. Wallace. Until he slays that dragon in next year's North Carolina primary, he has to be judged a longshot.

Harris' style strikes me as too "hot," to be revived to appeal to the urban voters who are the core of Democratic strength. But if it is true that George C. Wallace really exploits economic dissatisfactions and that those dissatisfactions are separable from his basic appeal as a racist, two propositions that I disbelieve, then Harris — a genuine, non-racist populist — is the right man to put those theories to the test.

Shriver is an exceptionally attractive public figure. But his vice-presidential campaign in 1972 did little to rescue the McGovern shambles or to establish his own political reputation. Shriver remains an unproven quantity.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is a 100-to-1 shot. Despite astute efforts to create a centrist image, this suave, handsome spokesman of the Texas financial establishment is perceived by labor, blacks, and other Democratic interest groups as too conservative.

But since the head of the ticket is sure to be a liberal, Bentsen is an excellent prospect for vice-president. Indeed, there are those who believe his real goal is to follow Lyndon Johnson's 1960 route and enter national office as the running-mate of Kennedy.

Rail Agency Unveils Plan

(c) Washington Star
Washington — The U.S. Railway Association Monday unveiled its final plan for restructuring the huge, bankrupt rail system in 17 states of the Northeast and Midwest, and said it would need $2.5 billion more in federal cash to refurbish the run-down system.

"It is a plan to begin the way out of crisis," Arthur D. Lewis, chairman of the government-created USRA, said as the association's report — product of more than a year or work — was issued.

The plan calls for consolidating most of the bankrupt rail lines into a 15,000-mile system to be run by the government-created Consolidated Rail Corp. About 5,700 miles of rail line would be abandoned or could be operated under a federal-state subsidy program.

Portions of the plan—principally the size of the system and the lines to be included—were made public a month ago when USRA sought comments on the system from the Interstate Commerce Commission. The final plan now must go to Congress, which has 60 working days to change it.

The plan calls for about 90,000 employees. About 3,300 employees would be dismissed, but most would be eligible for federal payments which could equal their earnings for the rest of their working lives.

The owners of the new Conrail system would be both the government, which would receive preferred stock and debentures (essentially corporate IOUs), in return for $1.8 billion in cash, and the creditors of the bankrupt railroads, principally banks and insurance companies, which would receive a combination of stocks and so-called "certificates of value" that would be redeemable by the federal government if Conrail fails to live up to financial expectation over the dozen years after it starts operation in early 1976.

USRA said it places a value of about $422.5 million on the properties of the bankrupt railroads that would be transferred to Conrail plus $86.2 million on the northeast corridor, a Washington-New York-Boston line that the association said should be placed under Amtrak's control.

USRA said Conrail is expected to lose money during its first three years in operation — starting off with a whopping $322 million loss next year.

Harvest Time In Dakota
Pete Cordell, who farms northeast of Watertown, S.D., streams some of his winter wheat through his fingers. Cordell figures his 30-acre wheat field will go about 20 bushels an acre. The winter wheat harvest is expected to be well underway throughout the state by this weekend.

NBC To Handle State Bonds, Stocks

State Treasurer Frank Marsh and State Investment Officer Don Mathes have contracted with the National Bank of Commerce to manage $160 million in state bonds and stocks.

Marsh said in an interview Monday that the arrangement ensures there will be no lag time between the time the state receives an interest payment on an investment and reinvests that interest.

Marsh said the lag time in the past has caused "a big squawk." Without the aid of a computer, Marsh said his staff physically was not capable of managing the investments.

Marsh said the state has agreed to maintain a minimum balance at NBC which the bank will assess management charges against. He said it won't be known until August exactly how much the bank will assess the state.

More importantly, however, the transfer of the investments (registered under the common name STANEB) is a step towards the day when the state's principal financial officers, treasurer, auditor, director of administrative services, investment officer and legislative fiscal analyst, have a common set of financial figures, he said.

Marsh said he was pleased that an arrangement could be worked out with a Nebraska rather than a Wall Street bank. Ex-State Investment Officer James Marchbach had planned to have Morgan Guaranty Bank of New York manage the state's investments.

On a related matter, Marsh said he has asked several more of the six clearinghouse banks the state uses to provide cost statements on a possible switch from a minimum balance to a flat fee per transaction basis to cover the cost of writing state warrants.

Earlier, Marsh had asked one of the three Lincoln clearinghouse banks to provide the information. He has since received that information and decided additional data from other banks are needed.

Axtell Senator Says NU Regents Breaking 'Intent' Of Meeting Law

By The Associated Press
Axtell Sen. Gary Anderson, author of the state's new open meetings law, said Monday that the University of Nebraska Board of Regents are still involved in the "perpetuation of the old system of closed government."

Last week, Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners found that the regents had violated the law at their June meeting, but did not prosecute them because they did not break the law knowingly.

Saturday, the regents had a two-hour closed session. Anderson said the session was technically legal because the regents used a portion of the open meetings law which allows for closed sessions to discuss personnel, real estate transactions and other matters.

Anderson said, "They're not illegal but I think they have broken the intent of the law."

Regent Robert Simmons of Scottsbluff made a motion at the Saturday meeting to have a similar session at the next meeting. It passed unanimously.

Simmons told The Star on Monday night that Anderson's statements were "ridiculous. I don't know what he's griping about. We followed the law. We took no votes (in the closed session) and we discussed possible litigation and property considerations." The law suggests both those issues as closed session items.

Simmons also said it was probable that the board would follow the same pattern of closed session voting at future meetings.

Anderson said, "I think making that kind of a plan in advance is contrary to the spirit of the law."

"We really have to trust the boards to use discretion," Anderson said. "That trust has been stretched very badly."

He said there may be no solution. The Axtell senator said it would be very hard to write a law with a "laundry list" that told exactly when a board could have a closed session.

Kennedy Repeats Candidacy Denial

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Monday a congressional colleague was wrong when he predicted the Massachusetts senator would run for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

Kennedy categorically denied — as he has repeatedly — that he will run for president in 1976.

The latest denial came after Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, the House Democratic leader and a long-time Kennedy confidant, told a national television audience, "My opinion is that Ted Kennedy is going to be a candidate for the presidency of the United States — and I know him fairly well."

O'Neill made the forecast on CBS' "Face the Nation" program Sunday.

O'Neill said he asked Kennedy about a week ago if the senator had changed his mind about running for president. He quoted Kennedy as saying, "You know, keep me alive, Tip."

O'Neill said Kennedy wants to run for president and that only the wishes of his family prevent him from doing so openly.

"Tip O'Neill is a good friend of mine," Kennedy told reporters Monday. "I'm sure that he understood that it was to keep me alive in Massachusetts and not as a presidential candidate."

Earlier, Kennedy, referring to O'Neill's comment, had observed, "I think that did not refer to the presidency at all."

Firepit In Pennsylvania About 16,000 Years Old

AVELLA, Pa. (AP) — Scientists say a firepit discovered here is the earliest evidence yet of human habitation in the Western Hemisphere, and say a second pit may be even older.

Pieces of charcoal about 16,000 years old were found at the Meadowcroft Rockshelter about 25 miles southwest of Pittsburgh. The charcoal and accompanying stone tools and artifacts were found under a large overhanging rock, which wandering tribes used for shelter.

Dr. James Adovasio, associate professor of anthropology at the University of Pittsburgh, says the recent findings support theories that humans crossed the Bering Strait from Asia between 20,000 and 30,000 B.C.

Radiocarbon dating of the findings shows that humans began to inhabit the rockshelter as early as 14,225 B.C., said Dr. Robert Struckenrath, head of the Smithsonian Institution's Radiocarbon Section.

Struckenrath said that makes this the earliest, well-dated evidence of human habitation in a stratified site in the Western Hemisphere.

Adovasio is hopeful that further digging will reveal evidence of even earlier human occupation since another firepit has been discovered directly below that one just dated.

Taylor Appeals Life Sentence In Turnbaugh Murder Case

Attorneys for Brian Lee Taylor, convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to life by the Douglas County District Court, Monday filed a notice of appeal of that conviction with the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Taylor's conviction resulted from the death of Archie Lee Turnbaugh, 20, of Omaha, on March 24. Turnbaugh's body was found lying in the street near 36th and Parker Sts.

Taylor, 27, pleaded guilty to the second degree murder charge, and the Douglas County public defender's office asked that the minimum sentence of 10 years be imposed.

However, District Judge Donald J. Hamilton imposed the maximum telling the man "you have forfeited your right to live as a free man."

College Trustee 'Work Sessions' Will Be Opened

The Nebraska State College Board of Trustees has decided to publish notices of its "working sessions" and open them to the public and press.

The decision came after a work session Friday morning that was not mentioned in published notices of the 1:30 p.m. Friday meeting.

Free Tickets Given To Poor

The Volunteer Bureau and the Junior League of Lincoln have developed a service to provide tickets for community programs and events to low-income people.

The two organizations match donated tickets with potential recipients who would otherwise not be able to attend community events. The recipients are determined according to need by various human service agencies.

During the first year of operation the Ticket Taker volunteers placed over 800 tickets. This year the organization hopes to place 2,000 tickets.

Oil Imports Drop; Trade In Surplus

Washington (AP) — A surprising 26% decline in oil imports during June helped give the United States a trade surplus of $1.7 billion, the biggest monthly surplus in the nation's history, the Commerce Department said Monday.

Oil imports in June totaled 118.2 million barrels, the lowest level of imports in at least 18 months the Department said. The value of imported oil was slightly more than $1.4 billion the lowest in 17 months.

Government trade analysts said they now believe the nation could end up with a trade surplus as high as $7 billion this year. That was a big turnaround from estimates made six months ago that the nation could have a trade deficit in 1975 equal to last year's deficit of more than $2.3 billion.

It May Be Inexplicable

"I don't know if anyone can explain why oil imports are so low this year," said one analyst, who did not want to be quoted by name.

Oil imports during the first six month of this year were about 145 million barrels below the total for the final six months for 1974.

Commerce Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton said President Ford's two dollar-a-barrel tariff on imported oil "appears to be working" in holding down oil imports, but trade analysts said that could be only a partial explanation.

Other explanations, he said, include a reduction in demand for petroleum because of the nation's recession. A third reason might be that oil importers have previously built up big inventories and decided to reduce, he said.

"I don't think people ought to jump to any conclusion that oil imports are going to get progressively better," one analyst said.

"These figures could bounce right back the month ahead."

Morton said in a statement there was nothing in the June trade figures "to indicate any major change in our basic position of dependence on foreign produced petroleum."

Productivity Rises

In other economic news Monday the Labor Department reported the first increase in productivity in the private economy since last year.

The department said output per hour of all persons in the economy went up by 2% during the second quarter of the year. Productivity had not increased since the second quarter of 1974.

The department said there was a 0.4% in total output during the quarter, but hours worked declined even more, 2.3%, resulting in an increase in productivity, or output per man hour.

Deficit Is $44.2 Billion

Budget director James T. Lynn, meanwhile, released final figures on the 1975 budget which showed the nation had a total budget deficit of $44.2 billion, compared with a 1974 deficit of $3.5 billion.

He said Ford's proposed budget deficit in 1976 of $60 billion will almost certainly be exceeded unless Congress approves some spending cuts before it adjourns in August.

He also indicated the minimum budget deficit for fiscal 1977 would be about $34 billion.

A Commerce Department trade analyst said the price of imported oil also declined slightly in June. He said the price of an imported barrel of crude oil was $11.40, down from the 1975 high of $11.69 in April.

Total imports of all goods in June were $6.954 billion, down 2% from May. Exports totaled $8.691 billion, up 6.7% from May, largely because of increased sales of motor vehicles, wheat, power machinery and civilian aircraft.

Surplus Is Fifth

The trade surplus of $1.737 billion was the fifth monthly surplus this year, and the total surplus for the first six months of the year was $5.4 billion.

Trade analysts said it is likely that when the nation's economy begins to recover from recession, there will be an increase in imports that will tend to bring the nation's trade in future months closer to balance.

But they said it is possible that trade for the year could set a surplus record, exceeding the record of nearly $7.1 billion in 1964. The previous monthly record surplus was just under $1.4 billion in March. The surplus in May was just under $1.1 billion.

Dollar Stronger

The nation's improved trade picture has led to a significant strengthening of the U.S. dollar in world money markets in recent months, which has tended to increase the value of U.S. goods sold abroad and to decrease cost of goods imported to this country.

Morton said oil imports during the first six months declined in value by $2.3 billion from the last half of 1974, but predicted oil imports would increase rapidly again as the economy gains strength.

Non-oil imports were down $4.7 billion during the first six months of the year, with major declines occurring in the categories of food and live animals and in machinery and transport equipment.

The major improvement on the export side has been in machinery and transport equipment, which increased 19% to total exports of $21.7 billion.

12-13 Mills Said Needed To Run County

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Between 12 and 13 mills will be needed to finance county-run departments this fiscal year, according to initial estimates by County Board Chairman Jan Gauger.

"We're trying to hold the mill levy as close to 12 mills as we can, so that we can make some room for growth next year," said Mrs. Gauger Monday afternoon. The County Board's mill levy cannot go higher than 14.285 mills according to state law.

Bond Rules Favored

Davenport, Iowa (UPI) — Rep. Thomas Higgins, D-Davenport, says he will propose legislation next year to prohibit cities from issuing tax increment urban renewal bonds for the benefit of private firms.

A mill is equivalent to $1 per $1,000 of assessed valuation in tax computations. Property is assessed at 35% of appraised value.

The mill levy for the 1974-75 Lancaster County budget was almost 10.7 mills, based on general and special fund needs of about $7,379,500.

The three Commissioners spent Saturday trimming almost $800,000 from the budget proposals submitted by the 36 county departments.

The board made a major cut in the county engineering budgets, slashing $428,000 from the road and bridge fund. The engineer's general fund budget was cut by $70,000 during Friday budget sessions.

The road and bridge fund total is $2,672,960, about the same as was budgeted last year, and the general fund budget is currently $450,000.

"It is difficult to do all the projects the Engineering Department proposes in one year," said Mrs. Gauger about the budget cuts. "We have to offset this heavy reliance on the mill levy."

Last year almost four mills of the county's tax levy went into the Engineering Department's budgets, including about three mills for the special road and bridge fund.

Final budget details and proposals for revenue sharing funds were being worked out Monday. The board hopes to trim the mill levy further by using revenue sharing money to purchase some new equipment included in departmental budgets.

For example about $80,000 in new voting booths for the Election Commission will come from revenue sharing funds.

The County Board's budget proposals should be completed by Wednesday, said Mrs. Gauger. Budget hearings are tentatively scheduled for mid-August.

A Senior Citizen's Work Is Never Done

By JOANNE FARRIS
QUESTION: "It makes me unhappy that we have 20 million-plus senior citizens in this country most of whom are too mentally lazy to get off their duffs and vote or take a stand! They could change the course of history if they would be involved instead of sitting around and waiting to die."
"It seems to me that they think, just because they are 60 or over, their work is done; far from it! If they don't get in there and pitch, regardless of how they feel, they'll soon have nothing to pitch at!"

POSTCARD by Stan Dolaplan

Cognac, France — Though no other region can call its grape brandy "Cognac," the people who make it don't claim any secret formula. The reason cognac is good is because the grapes make terrible wine. That's how cognac began.

There is a lively market every Saturday in the town of Cognac — the salamander arms of Francois I are carved on a palace alongside the river.

A famous cognac maker I know is one of the buyers who come here to get stocks for later blending.

Each Frenchman, I gather, jumps on his own grapes.

Then he distills the wine into cognac and waits for a favorable market. It's kind of a cottage industry.

"The grower keeps a stock as an investment," said the cognac maker. "It gains value while it is aging, year after year. Oh, yes, there's a gamble. You don't know the prices next year. But generally it is quite safe."

The cognac region is one of those rare parts of France where tourists don't go. Or at least they don't stop. They go wheeling on down to Bordeaux and fashionable Biarritz.

It is rolling country along the placid Charente river. The soil is so chalky that the vineyards are patterns of green-and-white stripes.

The vines carry mainly Folle Blanche and St. Emilion grapes.

And grown here, the wine is rather acid.

But if you distill it and put it in oak casks for a few years — wow! Cognac!

The cognac region is divided in districts. All brandy from the region can be called cognac. But there are subdivisions where they claim BETTER cognac.

Grand Champagne, Petite Champagne, Borderies, Fins Bois, Bons Bois, Bois Ordinaires, and Bois Communs.

Cognac is a small area. Halfway down France on the Atlantic side. Each sub district produces a slightly different quality of brandy.

The "great" cognac comes from the Grande Champagne district in the center. And France allows this to be labeled "Grande Fine Champagne."

My cognac maker host sniffs at this as snobbery. (He sniffs cognac all day long as part of the testing process. Therefore, his sniff can register anything from approval to indignation.)

He blends cognacs from various districts — though he won't have anything from the lower-quality "bois ordinaires" and "bois communs."

A few other things I learned about cognac:

V.S.O.P. means "Very Superior Old Pale." Cognac used to ship a "Brown" cognac to England. The coachmen drank it with steaming water. The gentry sat inside and guzzled the elegant "Pale."

Three Star, V.O. and V.S.O.P. are code marks that vary with the maker. Generally, V.S.O.P. has been aged up to ten years. But the real test is the price — the more cost, the older the brandy.

Cognac is distilled at 140 proof. It comes down to 80 proof by aging — and evaporation. The maker loses three barrels in every 100 each year.

The older the brandy, the more he evaporated in making it. So the higher the price. Catch?

The long cognac bottle and the squat cognac bottle — usually used for V.S.O.P. — are a matter of bottler's taste. (Not determined by age or law as I thought.)

After about ten years, it doesn't help cognac to stay in the oak cask. In fact, it begins to taste woody. So they draw it out and put it in huge bottles.

After that, nothing much happens to it.

Here they say: "The bottle is the grave of the cognac."

So if you buy one of those rare 100-year-olds, you are only buying tail fins, cher Pierre.

It quit aging ten years after the Frenchman jumped on the grapes.

"I swear when some pampered dame, who is spoiled beyond belief, looks at me helplessly and says: 'What can I do? I'm only one.' I could explode. Yes, I'm 65 too, but let me tell you, I let my wishes to known to my Senators and Representatives; they usually answer . . .

"It's a hard life and if we don't take a stand and understand our position we're as dead as if we were six feet under.

"Please, keep hammering away at the older people. They need something more than bingo, pap, and a rocking chair."

ANSWER: You've said it all and said it well. It's awfully easy for some of us to convince ourselves that we don't count or that we can't do anything about the things we don't like. But you are right. Our Congressmen do respond and they do react to what their constituents say to them.

It is the responsibility of each and every one of us to keep ourselves informed about the issue of the day, to make our wishes known to our elected representatives and to vote, in local as well as national elections.

The House of Representatives now has a Select Committee on Aging, which is the counterpart of the Senate's Special Committee on Aging. Rep. William J. Randall (D-Mo.) is chairman of the new House Committee.

There is also the U.S. Administration on Aging in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, located at 330 C Court St., S.W., HEW South, Washington, D.C. 20201.

Organizations which work for the elderly via the political process include: National Association of Retired Federal Employees, 1909 Q St., N.W. Washington, D.C. 20009; The National Caucus On The Black Aged, 1725 DeSales St., N.W. Washington, D.C. 20036;

National Council of Senior Citizens, 1911 K St., N.W., Room 202, Washington, D.C. 20006; American Association of Retired Persons, National Retired Teachers Association, 1909 K St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

At present the above organizations do not include even half of the over-65-year-olds in our country. In another part of her letter, Mrs. B.W. mentioned the power which would reside in a political organization which had a dollar for every American over 65 to utilize in lobbying efforts on behalf of the elderly!

A coalition of the 20 million Americans who are 65 and older with the 18 million who are between 55 and 65 years old could be awesome if it chose to exert its political power.

Improved Telephone Service Sought

By United Press International
The Nebraska Public Service Commission Monday voted unanimously to put the Cornhusker State Telephone Co. on notice that service must be improved in four areas.

No Deviation Planned
Washington (UPI) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns told Congress the Fed plans no deviation from its moderate monetary policy but declined to discuss what inflationary, unemployment and growth rates are likely to spring from that policy.

The vote, on a motion by Commissioner Duane Gay of Columbus, was unanimous to conduct an investigation into service levels in some exchanges of the Wisner-based utility.

The areas covered include Herman, Fordyce, St. Helena and Wynot.

Gay said despite new equipment, many complaints have been lodged with the commission.

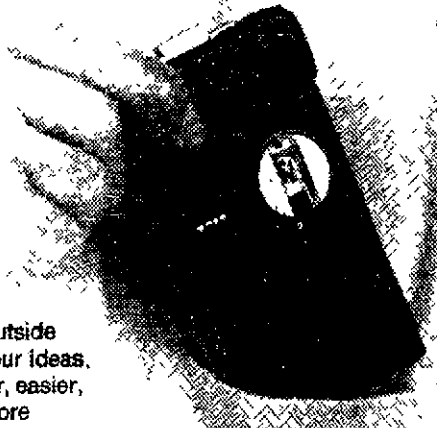

"I'm just convinced that unless we take a drastic step, the service won't improve," he said.

In the meantime, a rate increase request from Cornhusker will be held for later action. Cornhusker is seeking a $163,000 rate increase.

In a separate case, the commission staff said it would have information filed by Thursday in connection with a rate increase requested by Continental Telephone Co.

The commissioners also voted to hire a rate consultant in connection with a rate increase requested by United Telephone Co. of the West.

A Senior Citizen's Work Is Never Done

By JOANNE FARRIS
QUESTION: "It makes me unhappy that we have 20 million-plus senior citizens in this country most of whom are too mentally lazy to get off their duffs and vote or take a stand! They could change the course of history if they would be involved instead of sitting around and waiting to die.

"It seems to me that they think, just because they are 60 or over, their work is done; far from it! If they don't get in there and pitch, regardless of how they feel, they'll soon have nothing to pitch at!

"I swear when some pampered dame, who is spoiled beyond belief, looks at me helplessly and says: 'What can I do? I'm only one.' I could explode. Yes, I'm 65 too, but let me tell you, I let my wishes be known to my Senators and Representatives; they usually answer . . .

"It's a hard life and if we don't take a stand and understand our position we're as dead as if we were six feet under.

"Please, keep hammering away at the older people. They need something more than bingo, pap, and a rocking chair."

ANSWER: You've said it all and said it well. It's awfully easy for some of us to convince ourselves that we don't count or that we can't do anything about the things we don't like. But you are right. Our Congressmen do respond and they do react to what their constituents say to them.

It is the responsibility of each and every one of us to keep ourselves informed about the issue of the day, to make our wishes known to our elected representatives and to vote, in local as well as national elections.

The House of Representatives now has a Select Committee on Aging, which is the counterpart of the Senate's Special Committee on Aging. Rep. William J. Randall (D-Mo.) is chairman of the new House Committee. There is also the U.S. Administration on Aging in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, located at 330 C Court St., S.W., HEW South, Washington, D.C. 20201.

Organizations which work for the elderly via the political process include: National Association of Retired Federal Employees, 1909 Q St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009; The National Caucus On The Black Aged, 1725 DeSales St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036;

National Council of Senior Citizens, 1911 K St., N.W., Room 202, Washington, D.C. 20005; American Association of Retired Teachers Association, 1909 K St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

At present the above organizations do not include even half of the over-65-year-olds in our country. In another part of her letter, Mrs. B.W. mentioned the power which would reside in a political organization which had a dollar for every American over 65 to utilize in lobbying efforts on behalf of the elderly!

A coalition of the 20 million Americans who are 65 and older with the 18 million who are between 55 and 65 years old could be awesome if it chose to exert its political power.

Cognac, France — Though no other region can call its grape brandy "Cognac," the people who make it don't claim any secret formula. The reason cognac is good is because the grapes make terrible wine.

That's how cognac began. There is a lively market every Saturday in the town of Cognac — the salamander arms of France I am carved on a palace alongside the river.

A famous cognac maker I know is one of the buyers who come here to get stocks for later blending.

Each Frenchman, I gather, jumps on his own grapes.

Then he distills the wine into cognac and waits for a favorable market. It's kind of a cottage industry.

"The grower keeps a stock as an investment," said the cognac maker. "It gains value while it is aging, year after year. Oh, yes, there's a gamble. You don't know the prices next year. But generally it is quite safe."

The cognac region is one of those rare parts of France where tourists don't go. Or at least they don't stop. They go wheeling on down to Bordeaux and fashionable Biarritz.

It is rolling country along the placid Charente river. The soil is so chalky that the vineyards are patterns of green-and-white stripes.

The vines carry mainly Folle Blanche and St. Emilion grapes.

And grown here, the wine is rather acid.

But if you distill it and put it in oak casks for a few years — wow! Cognac!

The cognac region is divided in districts. All brandy from the region can be called cognac. But there are subdivisions where they claim BETTER cognac.

Grand Champagne, Petite Champagne, Borderies, Fins Bois, Bons Bois, Bois Ordinaires, and Bois Communs.

Cognac is a small area. Halfway down France on the Atlantic side. Each sub district produces a slightly different quality of brandy.

The "great" cognac comes from the Grande Champagne district in the center. And France allows this to be labeled "Grande Fine Champagne."

My cognac maker host sniffs at this as snobbery. (He sniffs cognac all day long as part of the testing process. Therefore, his sniff can register anything from approval to indignation.)

He blends cognacs from various districts — though he won't have anything from the lower-quality "bois ordinaires" and "bois communs."

A few other things I learned about cognac:

V.S.O.P. means "Very Superior Old Pale." Cognac used to ship a "Brown" cognac to England. The coachmen drank it with steaming water. The gentry sat inside and guzzled the elegant "Pale."

Three Star, V.O. and V.S.O.P. are code marks that vary with the maker. Generally, V.S.O.P. has been aged up to ten years. But the real test is the price — the more cost, the older the brandy.

Cognac is distilled at 140 proof. It comes down to 80 proof by aging — and evaporation. The maker loses three barrels in every 100 each year.

The older brandy, the more he evaporated in making it. So the higher the price. Catch?

The long cognac bottle and the squat cognac bottle — usually used for V.S.O.P. — are a matter of bottler's taste. (Not determined by age or law as I thought.)

After about ten years, it doesn't help cognac to stay in the oak cask. In fact, it begins to taste woody. So they draw it out and put it in huge bottles.

After that, nothing much happens to it.

Here they say: "The bottle is the grave of the cognac."

So if you buy one of those rare 100-year-olds, you are only buying tail fins, cher Pierre.

It quit aging ten years after the Frenchman jumped on the grapes.

Career Switching Gains Momentum

Alvin Toffler hinted at it in "The Culture Consumers." Then he picked up the thread in his best selling "Future Shock."

People are switching more... and liking it more. Jobs, that is.

They're turning in their old careers in exchange for new ones.

Part of the current job swapping has to do with our technological age in which some jobs are phased out while new ones are created. Who would have dreamed a quarter century ago that people would be preparing material to be fed into computers? Or that the old method of hot metal typesetting would be abandoned?

Even more surprisingly, people in their middle years, comfortable in their jobs, used to the routine and status quo, are cashing it all in and heading for new horizons.

Take Lloyd "Buck" Mills, for instance. He was a Lincoln firefighter for nearly 30 years — 10 of them as the training officer, drilling the city's firefighters in the best and safest techniques of saving lives and property.

At 55, Mills turned in his badge in return for a pension.

And he found another job. Something right up his alley.

He had always dreamed of spending his days on a golf course. Not as a professional player there wasn't any money in golf during Mills' younger days. But as a course manager.

His dream has come true. Mills is now managing the Pine Lake Golf Course, open to the public just this season.

Ken Stevens was in public relations for 18 years — moving from job to job, beefing up different programs.

He felt he was "spinning (his) wheels." Stevens wanted "to do something more productive." He was on the lookout for something he "could enjoy," something of his own.

Two years ago, Stevens got out of the public relations business and started a business of his own.

Now known as "Mr. Bike," Stevens spends his days selling bikes and advising and being a sounding board to bicycle enthusiasts.

And he stunned the doomsayers who predicted his business "would go in the hole the first year." One thing the pessimists said was on target, however — the big bike boom busted just as Stevens opened his shop. But business is good anyway, he said. Stevens works harder, longer hours, but finds his work "more enjoyable."

"The trend for change in jobs is really one that we're beginning to take more note of now than we have for the last 20 years," observed Dr. Mary Jane Even of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Department of Adult and Continuing Education. It's always been there, but "there's more of it," she added.

"Many now says the average person will have seven to nine totally new occupations and work orientations in a lifetime," Dr. Even said, attributing career switches to specialization and the rapidly changing nature of jobs and attitudes toward work. "It's just the way society is doing things now."

She has gone that route, too. "I already have been in five different 'careers,' Dr. Even said.

'MR. BIKE'... Stevens now has business of his own.

The Old Swimming Hole

By GLEN L. GINGLES

I learned to swim in a tiny creek that flowed through our farm in the southeastern part of the state. The wind had blown down a giant elm tree leaving the roots half embedded on one bank and the branches caught behind a stump on the other. Water flowing over the tree trunk had washed the muddy silt from the bed of the stream, leaving a good-sized pool about six feet deep with a firm bottom. Upstream, clear cold water gushed from a number of springs to keep the creek flowing all summer. This was the deepest and cleanest body of water in that area.

My two brothers and I spent many happy hours swimming, diving and splashing around in our "old swimming hole." On hot summer days, kids came from miles around to join us in its refreshing coolness. None of us had swimsuits and wouldn't have worn them anyway since the pool was surrounded by tall trees, out of sight of house or road. Besides, it was more fun to swim in our bare skin.

One summer day, when eight or ten of us were whooping it up in the water, a couple of older girls from a neighboring farm sneaked up on us. No one had noticed them coming but all at once they were standing on the bank watching us. We were at the age when we hated all girls and considered them an unnecessary nuisance. Since we were all stark naked, there was a big scramble for deep water where we all huddled with only our heads showing.

write

My brother Hugh, the oldest of our gang, now spoke up. "You girls beat it," he ordered. "We don't want you hanging around here."

"Oh yeah," one of the girls glibed, "what're you gonna do about it?"

"You'll see," Hugh warned, starting toward them. But his modesty won out and stopped short of exposing himself. "Just go away and leave us alone or you'll be sorry," he threatened.

The girls whispered and giggled a few minutes, then proceeded to tie our shirts and overalls (this was all the clothes we wore in those carefree days) into knots, then toss them into the branches of the surrounding trees. After which they retreated, shouting insults and laughing until they were out of sight.

If you've never climbed a tree in your bare skin, you have no idea how rough and scratchy the bark can be. By the time we had recovered and sorted out our clothes and untangled the knots, we were howling for revenge.

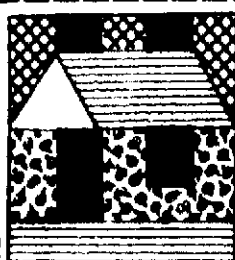

After some persuasion, Marvin, the girls' younger brother, promised to keep a close watch on his sisters day and night if necessary. If it seemed to him they might be planning to go swimming, he was to let Hugh or me know immediately.

Sure enough, one evening a few days later, Marvin dashed into our yard all excited and out of breath. "They're on the way to the swimming hole right now," he panted. "They should be in by the time you get there."

Hugh and I had already planned our method of operation. Keeping out of sight by sneaking from tree to tree as we neared the swimming hole, we spotted two neat piles of clothes on a grassy spot some distance up on the bank. The girls were squealing and splashing around in the water and I was sure they didn't see us. We each grabbed a pile of clothes and left an old gunny sack in its place. It took only a few seconds and we were out of sight again.

When we got home we decided it would serve the girls right if we tied their clothes in knots like they had ours. I was about to start tying knots when a piece of paper fell out of the things I was carrying. On it, scrawled in girlish handwriting, was this message: "You can throw these old rags away. We hid our clothes on the other bank." Only then did we discover that all we'd brought back was indeed old rags.

Bridge is much more a question of how many or how few mistakes you make rather than how frequently you make brilliant bids or plays.

Oddly enough, the most common errors are due to the tendency of players to follow general rules blindly — instead of branching out on their own when the situation calls for it.

Consider this deal where West was faced with the problem of what to lead after cashing the A-K-Q of clubs. Actually, he led a spade, hoping to find his partner with the king, and declarer easily made the contract.

But this was not a very good play for West to make. He should have realized that not only was South highly likely to have the king of spades for his opening bid, but that even if East had the king there was nothing to be gained by leading a spade at this point.

Instead, West should have played the four of clubs at trick four! This would have cut declarer down to size after East ruffed with the ten and made West's jack the setting trick.

West should reason that not only is there a reasonable chance of finding partner with a high trump — in which case the fourth club lead will beat the contract — but that nothing will be lost if East does not have a high trump to ruff with.

It must be granted that a defender seldom makes a play of the type recommended here — because most of us have been indoctrinated with the precept that you never give declarer a ruff and discard.

However, this is not really a ruff-discard situation where declarer can gain a trick by the club lead, and it therefore behooves West to fire a club at declarer at trick four because it offers by far the best chance of stopping the contract.

I'd like to reinforce your view. Many years ago, when I was the editor of a small newspaper, one of the town's leading citizens, who was also an attorney and church leader, made some bad investments. Shortly thereafter, he killed himself.

His two daughters, who were my cherished friends, sent their boyfriends to ask me to please leave out that their father had committed suicide when his death was reported in the paper. The competing newspaper agreed to omit it if we would.

I refused, saying, "If we omit it, the girls will be living a lie for the rest of their lives. If we print the truth, it will be forgotten in 24 hours."

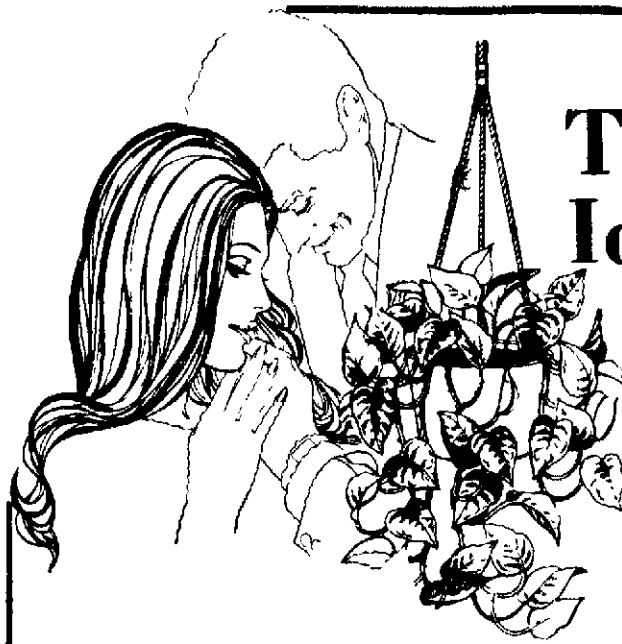

I published the truth and the family admitted afterward that I had done the right thing. They also bought 50 newspapers.

ERA Won't Affect Right To Privacy

DEAR ABBY: You indicated that you were in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment. I am amazed at you. Don't you know that if it becomes law, there will no longer be separate public restrooms for men and women? And the men and women will not have separate quarters in college dorms, prisons, schools, locker rooms and even public hospitals? Do your homework!

DEAR AGAINST: Do yours! In 1965, the Supreme Court established the constitutional right to privacy. This permits the separation of the sexes in all places involving sleeping, disrobing and all other private functions.

DEAR ABBY: I have been teaching Sunday school for five years. I teach first-grade children who are 6-years-old.

My problem is the pastor's son. This child pulls rank on me at every turn I make. He lets me know that because he is the pastor's son, I can't tell him what to do.

You can imagine what this does to me and the other children. I get absolutely no cooperation from his parents. The father is merely an older replica of his son.

What can I do to remedy this situation? I am fond of my class and love to teach, but I can't take much more verbal abuse or the kicking this child dishes out. I've bent over backwards to be nice to him but get nowhere.

Pair's Quilting Hobby Began With Challenge

By JOEL THORSON

Omaha Nebraska Bureau
David City — Ernest and Isabelle Haight's artistry has spread a lot of warmth around Butler County.

The farm couple's prize-winning quilting, "a hobby that degenerated into a business," began with a challenge back in the Depression years. Isabelle was hand-quilting a quilt-top pieced by her mother when Ernest — a one-time engineer — made an offhand comment about its lack of precision.

Why not try making a better one, Isabelle suggested?

Proudly Displayed

In the 40 years since, the Haight's joint quilting creations have been displayed in such places as Grand Island's Stahr Museum, Lincoln's Sheldon Gallery and numerous local exhibitions. Their gift quilts, each inscribed with an edge-stitched personalized message, are proudly displayed in the homes of dozens of friends and relatives.

Ernest is the author of a book on machine-quilting and has given stage demonstrations of his techniques at the Nebraska State Fair. A rosebud pattern pieced by Ernest and hand-quilted by Isabelle was named the top 1971 quilt in its class, and several others have won top awards at the fair.

"anything that gets a ribbon is not for sale," Ernest says, browsing through a stack of quilts piled high in a corner of the Haight living room.

Each bears a fanciful name like "Grandmother's Old-Fashioned Newsgay" or "Fifty-Four Forty or Fight" or "Star of St. Louis" and is emblazoned with a sunburst pattern, geometric cube arrangement, floral design, stained-glass effect, scenic print, star or broken star. One, entitled "Quilt of a Thousand Prints," is a dazzling patchwork containing some 6,700 postage-stamp-size blocks.

Using standard patterns as well as designs of his own creation, Ernest spends as much as 30 hours carefully piecing the "blocks" of material together with his sewing machine.

Although the blocks appear to have been added individually, Ernest says efficiency and accuracy are increased by sewing many strips of fabric together, then cutting them crosswise to create patchwork strips, which are sewn together to form the quilt-top.

The keys to fine piecing, Ernest says, are sewing precise seams, making sure the corners of the blocks touch, and using good materials such as broadcloth and percale with colors that go nicely together.

The finished quilt-top is attached — "quilted" — to the lining, with a layer of batting in between. For years, Isabelle quilted her husband's tops with ornate hand stitching. But in the last few years, cataracts have forced her to content herself writing poetry and teaching piano. "If I'm going to put in that much effort to make a quilt, I'm going to do it right," she says.

All By Machine

Isabelle hopes the series of operations she has undertaken will eventually allow her to resume quilting. Meanwhile, Ernest does all his own by machine — and quilts other people's piecwork as well.

Isn't quilting "women's work"? The way frontier laborers were divided, it used to be, Isabelle, for instance, learned hand-quilting from her maternal grandmother, and Ernest remembers that Grandma Haight used to pass the time tying crazy quilts.

But that didn't stop Ernest's retired farmer father from taking up hand-quilting at the age of 75 when Ernest began piecing some 40 years ago.

Together, they fashioned wedding-present quilts for Ernest and Isabelle's five little children, so that each could have a lasting memento of Dad's and Granddad's craftsmanship.

Relieves Tension

Besides providing family heirlooms and winning ribbons, Ernest says, quilting "keeps me out of mischief" and relieves tension.

While he was still farming full-time, he says, he often came in "dog-tired" after a day on the tractor and started piecing a quilt — finding that "at 11 I'd have to force myself to go to bed because I wasn't tired any more."

The Haight's five grown children aren't interested in quilting. "They say they don't need to," Isabelle says; "they get theirs without." But Ernest notes with satisfaction that a quilting group in Omaha includes some young members who are busy giving lessons and copyrighting quilt patterns.

DUPLICATE . . . of 1971 prize-winner displayed by Haight's.

Omaha's City Hall Draws Zero Bids

Omaha (AP) — Omaha's interim City Hall, where many an important decision was made over the past decade, went on the auction block Monday morning, but there were no takers. No written or oral bids were received on the building which cost the city $600,000 back in 1965. Monday's bidding was to start at $437,000. The center of city government moved about four months ago to the new Omaha-Douglas County Civic Center, and interim City Hall now sits idle collecting dust and memories.

Zorinsky Would Veto Any Omaha Tax Hike

Omaha (AP) — Returning to his office for the first time in three weeks, Mayor Edward Zorinsky said Monday he will veto any increase in the city's property tax mill levy. The mayor's budget for the upcoming year was presented to the City Council while Zorinsky was away at the National Mayors' Conference and on a goodwill trip to Poland.

The budget does not call for an increase in property taxes, and Zorinsky said it will not cause a cutback in city services. However, several City Council members, most notably Council President Robert Cunningham, disagree with Zorinsky's assessment of the situation, and think taxes will have to be raised to avert a cutback in services.

Reacting to criticism from Cunningham and Councilman Monte Taylor, Zorinsky said the two are "trying to make an emotional issue out of it instead of discussing it as mature adults."

Cunningham called Zorinsky's budget proposal the third disaster to hit the city this year — the first two being the January blizzard and the May tornado. Zorinsky replied, "The first disaster may have occurred when Mr. Cunningham was elected to his present term on the council."

In addition to his plan to veto any property tax increase, Zorinsky also said he wants to see a $30 million bond issue for street and sewer repairs put on next May's ballot.

The bond vote was originally slated in November 1976, but the mayor said he decided to push it ahead six months after meeting with members of his administration.

Zorinsky said the bonds could be issued at a rate of $6 million for five years without raising taxes.

Ervin E. Stewart and Victor L. Royal, both 26, have been charged robbery and using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

In addition, Stewart has been charged with shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim. The latter charge was filed in connection with a shootout with Omaha policemen early Saturday which resulted in Stewart's arrest.

Stewart was wounded in the incident, but was released from a local hospital Sunday. Royal surrendered to police Sunday.

The cash taken in the holdup, about $3,000, has not been recovered, police said Monday.

2 Omaha Men Charged With Holdup of S&L

Omaha (AP) — Two Omaha men have been formally charged in connection with last Friday's holdup at the Southside office of the Omaha Savings and Loan Association.

Ervin E. Stewart and Victor L. Royal, both 26, have been charged robbery and using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

In addition, Stewart has been charged with shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim. The latter charge was filed in connection with a shootout with Omaha policemen early Saturday which resulted in Stewart's arrest.

Stewart was wounded in the incident, but was released from a local hospital Sunday. Royal surrendered to police Sunday.

The cash taken in the holdup, about $3,000, has not been recovered, police said Monday.

Newman Is Leader

Fair To Feature Talent Contest

Fullerton — Among features of this year's Nance County Fair, to be held here Aug. 4-7, will be a Nance County talent contest, at 8 p.m. Aug. 5. Other attractions will include a semi-pro baseball game, 4-H club horse show, egg and pig catching contests, cow-milking contest, and 4-H livestock sale.

Sandhills Ag Lab Field Day Set

Tryon (AP) — A wide variety of cow-calf and crops research being conducted at the University of Nebraska's Sandhills Agricultural Laboratory will be highlighted during a field day Aug. 8. To accommodate visitors, two tours are to be conducted at the same time and then rotated to allow everyone to view the experiments. Staff members of the NU North Platte Station and Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources will explain the research projects.

Alcohol Abuse Class Planned

Ogallala (UPI) — The first alcohol abuse class in the Ogallala area for those convicted of alcohol related offenses is scheduled to begin Tuesday and continue for eight weeks. Under state law, those convicted of such offenses may choose between taking classes or accepting punishment. Under the program provided in the law, those enrolled in the classes are technically on probation. Officials said 12 persons signed up for the first session.

Mid-Plains College Budget Hearing Slated

North Platte (UPI) — A public hearing will be held today on a proposed $2.9 million budget for the operation of the Mid-Plains Technical Community College area. The hearing on the $2,945,580 proposal for the operation of the area campuses at McCook and North Platte will begin at 7:30 p.m. The proposal represents an increase of $56,166 over the current year's budget. Of the total, the McCook Community College would get $786,328 with the rest going to the North Platte campus.

Wayne FM Station Licensed

Wayne (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission has granted a license for the first fulltime FM radio station in Wayne. Theodore Storck, owner of station KTH-AM, said the FM station will be KTH-FM and will operate from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. Storck said the new station will allow broadcast of Wayne State College and Wayne High School athletic contests played at night.

Board May Take Stand On Dams

Omaha (AP) — The Douglas County Board of Commissioners may take a position today on the proposed dams along streams in eastern Nebraska. However, the position to be taken isn't clear, according to Commissioner Dan Lynch. Lynch, who generally opposes the dams, said he understands the board must take a stand by Thursday. Washington County officials are already on record in opposition to the various projects, while Sarpy County is for them.

Roads Dept. Drops Plan For O'Neill Truck Scale

O'Neill (UPI) — The State Roads Dept. has decided not to go any further with the idea of locating a truck scale in the O'Neill area.

In a letter that followed a move by O'Neill residents to block location of a scale in the area, Thomas Doyle, Roads Dept. director, said, "The department will continue to consider other feasible and reasonable alternatives to that which we have now dropped."

Boxcar Door Kills Fireman

Ogallala (AP) — A volunteer fireman was killed early Monday while fighting a blaze that erupted at a Union Pacific Railroad boxcar about two miles east of here.

Officer said Clint McQueen, 34, of Ogallala, was killed when a steel boxcar door fell on him. It took 10 men to get the door off McQueen, who died minutes after the crushing.

Last Week's Rains Big Help To Soil

Nebraska's corn crop and soil moisture conditions improved due to rains received last week over the state, the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics reported Monday.

In its weekly crop-weather report, the bureau said topsoil moisture supplies are now adequate in 51% of the state, while subsoil moisture supplies are 45% adequate. As year ago topsoil and subsoil supplies were both 93% short, the report noted.

Irrigated corn is 29% excellent, 67% good and 4% fair in the state, county agents report. Over 70% of the irrigated corn has siled to date.

Dryland corn is reported 66% good, 2% excellent, 30% fair and 2% poor with over 55% siled. Corn rootworm and corn borer have reportedly been causing problems in both irrigated and non-irrigated corn fields of the eastern two-thirds of the state.

Meanwhile, winter wheat harvest in the state is nearing completion with over 90% cut, the bureau said. In the Panhandle, 65% of the wheat has been harvested.

Lincoln County Unable To Stop Funding Office

North Platte (UPI) — The Lincoln County commissioners, hoping to save $33,000 on next year's budget, must continue funding the county probation office and backtracking on a move to eliminate the office and staff.

The commissioners were told Monday that a state law gives the county judge responsibility over the county probation office, and that the commissioners are prohibited from discontinuing funds for the office or in ordering the dismissal of the staff without the approval of the county judge.

Milton Larson, county attorney, had requested an opinion from the Nebraska attorney general's office to clear up questions about the commissioners' decision to dismiss Marv Ready, head of the county probation office, and his staff.

The commission had wanted to trim $33,000 from the county budget by eliminating the office and turning its functions over to the state.

Sorghum, soybean and alfalfa hay conditions also improved during the week because of the rains.

Sorghum was reported excellent in 8% of the counties, good in 70%, fair in 21% and poor in one per cent. Greenbugs continue to be a problem for sorghum growers in most areas of the state, the ag report said.

Soybean condition was reported as excellent in 12% of the counties, good in 79%, and fair in 9%. To date, over 20% of the soybeans have podded.

Sugarbeets and dry beans are making good progress except for fields damaged by hail. Fieldmen estimated 400 to 500 acres of dry beans damaged, and 6,000 to 7,000 acres of sugarbeets hit by the hail.

Pair's Quilting Hobby Began With Challenge

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

David City — Ernest and Isabelle Haight's artistry has spread a lot of warmth around Butler County.

The farm couple's prize-winning quilting, "a hobby that degenerated into a business," began with a challenge back in the Depression years. Isabelle was hand-quilting a quilt-top pieced by her mother when Ernest — a onetime engineer — made an offhand comment about its lack of precision.

Why not try making a better one, Isabelle suggested?

Proudly Displayed

In the 40 years since, the Hights' joint quilting creations have been displayed in such places as Grand Island's Stuh Museum, Lincoln's Sheldon Gallery and numerous local exhibitions. Their gift quilts, each inscribed with an edge-stitched personalized message, are proudly displayed in the homes of dozens of friends and relatives.

Ernest is the author of a book on machine-quilting, and has given stage demonstrations of his techniques at the Nebraska State Fair. A rosebud pattern pieced by Ernest and hand-quilted by Isabelle was named the top 1971 quilt in its class, and several others have won top awards at the fair.

"Anything that gets a ribbon is not for sale," Ernest says, browsing through a stack of quilts piled high in a corner of the Haight living room.

Each bears a fanciful name like "Grandmother's Old-Fashioned Noddy" or "Fifty-Four Forty or Fight" or "Star of St. Louis" and is embellished with a sunburst pattern, geometric cube arrangement, floral design, stained-glass effect, scenic print, star or broken star. One, entitled "Quilt of a Thousand Prints," is a dazzle patchwork containing some 6,700 postage-stamp-size blocks.

Using standard patterns as well as designs of his own creation, Ernest spends as much as 30 hours carefully piecing the "blocks" of material together with his sewing machine.

Although the blocks appear to have been added individually, Ernest says efficiency and accuracy are increased by sewing many strips of fabric together, then cutting them crosswise to create patchwork strips, which are sewn together to form the quilt-top.

The keys to fine piecing, Ernest says, are sewing precise seams, making sure the corners of the blocks touch, and using good materials such as broadcloth and percale with colors that go nicely together.

The finished quilt-top is attached — "quilted" — to the lining, with a layer of batting in between. For years, Isabelle quilted her husband's tops with ornate hand stitching. But in the last few years, cataracts have forced her to content herself writing poetry and teaching piano. "If I'm going to put in that much effort to make a quilt, I'm going to do it right," she says.

All By Machine

Isabelle hopes the series of operations she has undertaken will eventually allow her to resume quilting. Meanwhile, Ernest does all his own by machine — and quilts other people's piecwork as well.

Isn't quilting "women's work"? The way frontier laborers were divided, it used to be. Isabelle, for instance, learned hand-quilting from her maternal grandmother, and Ernest remembers that Grandma Haight used to pass the time tying crazy quilts.

But that didn't stop Ernest's retired farmer father from taking up hand-quilting at the age of 75 when Ernest began piecing some 40 years ago.

Together, they fashioned wedding-present quilts for Ernest and Isabelle's five little children, so that each could have a lasting memento of Dad's and Granddad's craftsmanship.

Relieves Tension

Besides providing family heirlooms and winning ribbons, Ernest says, quilting "keeps me out of mischief" and relieves tension.

While he was still farming full-time, he says, he often came in "dog-tired" after a day on the tractor and started piecing a quilt — finding that "at 11 I'd have to force myself to go to bed because I wasn't tired any more."

The Hights' five grown children aren't interested in quilting. "They say they don't need to," Isabelle says; "they get theirs without." But Ernest notes with satisfaction that a quilting group in Omaha includes some young members who are busy giving lessons and copyrighting quilt patterns.

Omaha's City Hall Draws Zero Bids

Omaha (AP) — Omaha's interim City Hall, where many an important decision was made over the past decade, went on the auction block Monday morning, but there were no takers.

No written or oral bids were received on the building which cost the city $600,000 back in 1965. Monday's bidding was to start at $437,000.

The center of city government moved about four months ago to the new Omaha-Douglas County Civic Center, and interim City Hall now sits idle collecting dust and memories.

The city would like to sell the building and get it back on the tax rolls, but it appears that such a sale will have to wait until the economy improves.

City officials said several inquiries were made about leasing the building, but no one was interested in buying it.

Zorinsky Would Veto Any Omaha Tax Hike

Omaha (AP) — Returning to his office for the first time in three weeks, Mayor Edward Zorinsky said Monday he will veto any increase in the city's property tax mill levy.

The mayor's budget for the upcoming year was presented to the City Council while Zorinsky was away at the National Mayors' Conference and on a goodwill trip to Poland.

The budget does not call for an increase in property taxes, and Zorinsky said it will not cause a cutback in city services.

However, several City Council members, most notably Council President Robert Cunningham, disagree with Zorinsky's assessment of the situation, and think taxes will have to be raised to avert a cutback in services.

Reacting to criticism from Cunningham and Councilman Monte Taylor, Zorinsky said the two are "trying to make an emotional issue out of it instead of discussing it as mature adults."

Cunningham called Zorinsky's budget proposal the third disaster to hit the city this year — the first two being the January blizzard and the May tornado.

Zorinsky replied, "The first disaster may have occurred when Mr. Cunningham was elected to his present term on the council."

In addition to his plan to veto any property tax increase, Zorinsky also said he wants to see a $30 million bond issue for street and sewer repairs put on next May's ballot.

The bond vote was originally slated in November 1976, but the mayor said he decided to push it ahead six months after meeting with members of his administration.

Zorinsky said the bonds could be issued at a rate of $6 million for five years without raising taxes.

2 Omaha Men Charged With Holdup of S&L

Omaha (AP) — Two Omaha men have been formally charged in connection with last Friday's holdup at the Southside office of the Omaha Savings and Loan Association.

Ervin E. Stewart and Victor L. Royal, both 26, have been charged robbery and using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

In addition, Stewart has been charged with shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim. The latter charge was filed in connection with a shootout with Omaha policemen early Saturday which resulted in Stewart's arrest.

Stewart was wounded in the incident, but was released from a local hospital Sunday.

Royal surrendered to police Sunday.

The cash taken in the holdup, about $3,000, has not been recovered, police said Monday.

Newman Is Leader

Across Nebraska

Fair To Feature Talent Contest

Fullerton — Among features of this year's Nance County Fair, to be held here Aug. 4-7, will be a Nance County talent contest, at 8 p.m. Aug. 5. Other attractions will include a semi-pro baseball game, 4-H club horse show, egg and pig catching contests, cow-milking contest, and 4-H livestock sale.

Sandhills Ag Lab Field Day Set

Tryon (AP) — A wide variety of cow-calf and crops research being conducted at the University of Nebraska's Sandhills Agricultural Laboratory will be highlighted during a field day Aug. 8. To accommodate visitors, two tours are to be conducted at the same time and then rotated to allow everyone to view the experiments. Staff members of the NU North Platte Station and Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources will explain the research projects.

Alcohol Abuse Class Planned

Ogallala (UPI) — The first alcohol abuse class in the Ogallala area for those convicted of alcohol related offenses is scheduled to begin Tuesday and continue for eight weeks. Under state law, those convicted of such offenses may choose between taking classes or accepting punishment. Under the program provided in the law, those enrolled in the classes are technically on probation. Officials said 12 persons signed up for the first session.

Mid-Plains College Budget Hearing Slated

North Platte (UPI) — A public hearing will be held today on a proposed $2.9 million budget for the operation of the Mid-Plains Technical Community College area. The hearing on the $2,945,580 proposal for the operation of the area campuses at McCook and North Platte will begin at 7:30 p.m. The proposal represents an increase of $556,186 over the current year's budget. Of the total, the McCook Community College would get $786,328 with the rest going to the North Platte campus.

Wayne FM Station Licensed

Wayne (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission has granted a license for the first fulltime FM radio station in Wayne. Theodore Storck, owner of station KTCH-AM, said the FM station will be KTCH-FM and will operate from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. Storck said the new station will allow broadcast of Wayne State College and Wayne High School athletic contests played at night.

Board May Take Stand On Dams

Omaha (AP) — The Douglas County Board of Commissioners may take a position today on the proposed dams along streams in eastern Nebraska. However, the position to be taken isn't clear, according to Commissioner Dan Lynch. Lynch, who generally opposes the dams, said he understands the board must take a stand by Thursday. Washington County officials are already on record in opposition to the various projects, while Sarpy County is for them.

Roads Dept. Drops Plan For O'Neill Truck Scale

O'Neill (UPI) — The State Roads Dept. has decided not to go any further with the idea of locating a truck scale in the O'Neill area.

In a letter that followed a move by O'Neill residents to block location of a scale in the area, Thomas Doyle, Roads Dept. director, said, "The department will continue to consider other feasible and reasonable alternatives to that which we have now dropped."

He said efforts would continue to "improve the effectiveness of our overweight and over-dimensional control program."

Doyle said, "I assure you that we will take no action which would tend to compromise safety on our highway system."

O'Neill residents had objected to the possible location of a scale at the west edge of town on U.S. 281-275 for safety reasons.

The possibility of putting in a truck scale there, which Doyle said in his letter never went beyond the tentative stage, arose from the need for a new scale to replace the one now at Iman.

Boxcar Door Kills Fireman

Ogallala (AP) — A volunteer fireman was killed early Monday while fighting a blaze that erupted in a Union Pacific Railroad boxcar about two miles east of here.

Officials said Clint McQueen, 34, of Ogallala, was killed when a steel boxcar door fell on him.

It took 10 firemen to get the door off McQueen, who died minutes after the mishap.

Crichton Chosen

Hollywood (UPI) — Michael Crichton, the young novelist-screenwriter-director, has been picked to direct Warner Brothers' upcoming movie, "The Last Tomb."

Last Week's Rains Big Help To Soil

Nebraska's corn crop and soil moisture conditions improved due to rains received last week over the state, the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics reported Monday.

In its weekly crop-weather report, the bureau said topsoil moisture supplies are now adequate in 51% of the state, while subsoil moisture supplies are 45% adequate. As year ago topsoil and subsoil supplies were both 93% short, the report noted.

Irrigated corn is 29% excellent, 67% good and 4% fair in the state, county agents report. Over 70% of the irrigated corn has silted to date.

Dryland corn is reported 66% good, 2% excellent, 30% fair and 2% poor with over 55% silted.

Corn rootworm and corn borer have reportedly been causing problems in both irrigated and non-irrigated corn fields of the eastern two-thirds of the state.

Meanwhile, winter wheat harvest in the state is nearing completion with over 90% cut, the bureau said. In the Panhandle, 65% of the wheat has been harvested.

Lincoln County Unable To Stop Funding Office

North Platte (UPI) — The Lincoln County commissioners, hoping to save $33,000 on next year's budget, must continue funding the county probation office and backtracking on a move to eliminate the office and staff.

The commissioners were told Monday that a state law gives the county judge responsibility over the county probation office, and that the commissioners are prohibited from discontinuing funds for the office or in ordering the dismissal of the staff without the approval of the county judge.

Milton Larson, county attorney, had requested an opinion from the Nebraska attorney general's office to clear up questions about the commissioners' decision to dismiss Marv Ready, head of the county probation office, and his staff.

The commission had wanted to trim $33,000 from the county budget by eliminating the office and turning its functions over to the state.

Sorghum, soybean and alfalfa hay conditions also improved during the week because of the rains.

Sorghum was reported excellent in 8% of the counties, good in 70%, fair in 21% and poor in one per cent. Greenbugs continue to be a problem for sorghum growers in most areas of the state, the ag report said.

Soybean condition was reported as excellent in 12% of the counties, good in 79%, and fair in 9%. To date, over 20% of the soybeans have podded.

Sugarbeets and dry beans are making good progress except for fields damaged by hail. Fieldmen estimated 400 to 500 acres of dry beans damaged, and 6,000 to 7,000 acres of sugarbeets hit by the hail.

Pasture and range feed supplies improved during the week and are now said to be adequate in 52% of the counties.

Settlement Details Still Not Released

Omaha (UPI) — The proposed settlement involving the rights of the mentally retarded at the Beatrice State Home, hammered out during week-long talks between attorneys, apparently will not be revealed until next week.

Attorneys on both sides sent the proposed agreement to U.S. District Judge Albert G. Schatz late Monday. Schatz recessed the trial indefinitely earlier in the day when a settlement appeared imminent.

On orders from Schatz, lawyers refused to release the details of the proposed settlement. Schatz must approve the settlement before it would become binding.

Pat Green, a Creighton University law professor appointed by the court as an intermediary, said Gov. J. James Exon's philosophy of treatment for the mental retarded made the case easier to resolve.

The suit claimed the Beatrice home residents were deprived of their constitutional rights because they allegedly did not receive adequate treatment. It also contended treatment should be given in a less restrictive setting.

The settlement is reported to involve reducing the more than 1,000 population at the home by about 75%, and increase treatment at community-based centers.

In addition, the settlement is said to establish a panel to review any federal court-approved placements of the mentally retarded and for the home to remain under the State Department of Public Institutions with community programs under the department's office of mental retardation.

The suit was filed in 1972 against the state on behalf of five children at the home. The U.S. Justice Department entered the case, which became a class action, and appeared to have played a major role in negotiations. The state claimed it was moving to correct some of the complaints alleged in the suit.

The settlement also is expected to expand the treatment program at the home and in community clinics, require periodic evaluation of progress and treatment of individuals and prohibit patients being placed at the home if proper local programs were available.

Dr. Patricia Sailor

Sailor Goes To Louisiana State

Dr. Patricia Sailor, the new director of the School of Home Economics at Louisiana State, said she feels qualified to assume this administrative position. "It's been people and programs, many of them here at Nebraska, that have made it possible for me to make this move," she said.

In order to accept her position at Louisiana State, Dr. Sailor recently resigned from her post as associate dean of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Home Economics and as assistant director of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

She joined the University of Nebraska staff in 1968 as associate professor of textiles, clothing and design and was promoted to professor in 1970.

"At the time I came to UNL from the University of Texas, the textiles, clothing and design department was growing rapidly. Now there has been substantial growth in the diversity of programs being offered to meet the increasing enrollment demands."

Dr. Sailor took an administrative internship sponsored by the American Council on Education at the University of Cincinnati during a leave of absence from UNL in 1973-74. She felt that it helped in terms of professional growth and that it made a difference in her effectiveness in the dean's office. She was named associate dean of the college in 1973 and has served in that post since.

"One of the nice things about Nebraska is that there are many different kinds of people to work with here," she said. "There are many intangible ways it was rewarding to be a faculty member here. In these times when educational institutions are facing financial crunches, there have to be other kinds of rewards for faculty if they're going to be happy. I think here at Nebraska faculty have the opportunity and the climate that allows them to develop and grow."

Dr. John C. Woodward has been appointed as the new associate dean of the College of Home Economics at the University of Nebraska. He has served as chairman of the Department of Human Development and the Family since he came to UNL in 1966.

Cook Set To Retire From Bankers Life

George B. Cook will retire this week as chairman of Bankers Life Nebraska.

Cook has worked for the Lincoln-based insurance firm for 44 years. He was named executive vice president and financial officer of the company in 1954, president in 1968 and chairman in 1969.

Cook is known for his involvement in civic activities. He was instrumental in the development of Gateway Shopping Center, Lincoln Industrial Park and Nebraska Center for Continuing Education. He worked for the purchase of the former Lincoln Air Base by the City of Lincoln.

He also served the University of Nebraska-Lincoln as chairman of the University of Nebraska Foundation board of directors. He is a past president and life member of the University's Alumni Assn.

Cook is a past director of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, past president and director of the Lincoln Chamber Industrial Development Corp. and current president of the Lincoln Industrial Park management board. He is a director and member of the executive committee of the Business Development Corp. of Nebraska.

Scottsbluff Man Escapes Office, Is Recaptured

Gering (AP) — An intensive search by local police, volunteer firemen, county authorities and the State Patrol ended with the capture of a Scottsbluff man early Monday.

A 16-year-old Scottsbluff girl, listed as a runaway, was taken into custody at the same time.

A check revealed another warrant for Salazar's arrest had been issued by Harris County, Tex.

After being returned to the Scottsbluff County Jail, Salazar bolted from the office while two officers were talking.

Two hours later, he was recaptured.

Detassellers Walking State's Fields Again

A sight that has diminished in recent years is returning to Nebraska seed corn fields this summer as hundreds of young people walk the long corn rows performing the chore of detasseling the plants.

Since the late '60s, less and less detasseling has been done, said Dr. Dale Flowerday, University of Nebraska agronomist.

The trend back to detasseling is attributed to a genetics situation developed in hybrid corn production over the years which makes seed corn vulnerable to disease. Dr. Flowerday explains the problem in this way.

A genetic strain known as Texas Male Sterile was developed in the late '60s by plant breeders. When this characteristic was incorporated into an inbred line of corn, the plant became unable to produce pollen. However, in producing the desired hybrid, a fertility restorer gene was incorporated into the variety, so the harvested seed from these TMS plants was again capable of pollination.

As a result, he said, detasseling was unnecessary and hybrid seed could be produced at less cost.

Ordinarily, each plant is able to shed pollen from its tassel and produce ears. In farm fields where corn is not produced for seed, the plants can and are allowed to pollinate themselves.

But in producing seed corn it is desirable to cross one plant with another, he said, creating the need to detassel one of the varieties. They then are not able to pollinate themselves or each other but are pollinated by the other variety in the same field, he explained.

Group Against UP Line Abandonment

Stapleton (UPI) — A weekend meeting was held to organize opposition to Union Pacific Railroad plans to abandon the UP line between Stapleton and Arnold.

Some 30 persons who attended the meeting were urged to write letters to their congressional representatives, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Nebraska Public Service Commission.

Purpose of the letters is to secure a public hearing on abandonment plans.

During the meeting, Cecil Weems, co-owner of the Stapleton Mill and Elevator, said he was told UP has been planning the abandonment for some time. He said UP employees told him in 1960 they had orders "not to replace ties west of Arnold and very few east of Arnold."

It was suggested that opponents seek support from such groups as the National Farmers Organization, the Grange, the Farm Bureau and others. "The louder you scream, the more you're going to accomplish," Weems said.

A similar meeting is planned Thursday night in the fire hall in Callaway.

On file with the Interstate Commerce Commission is a Union Pacific request to abandon the 19.6-mile segment between Stapleton and Arnold. UP said in the application that low traffic volume doesn't justify costs of improvements needed to keep the line in operation.

Corporate Farm Reports Too Numerous To Compile

Secretary of State Allen Beermann said Monday that he does not have the staff, the money or the authority to make a meaningful compilation of the thousands of corporate farm reports due in January.

The Legislature passed the Corporate Farm Reporting Act this year after rejecting proposals which would have outlawed corporate ownership of farmland.

Beermann said his estimates of the number of reports required by the law ranged from 3,000 to 11,000. He said it would cost approximately $8,000 just to collect the reports.

"It's going to be quite tricky for anyone to try to compare" the information on the reports.

The law requires each corporation owning or leasing farm or ranch land to file a report each year. The reports are to contain the number of acres owned, the names of corporate officers and the extent of foreign involvement in the corporation.

6 UNL Students Given Grants By Ag Dept.'s Wheat Division

Elton Haarberg of Imperial, chairman of the Nebraska Wheat Advisory Committee, has announced the names of six University of Nebraska-Lincoln junior and senior students who have been awarded grants from the Nebraska Agriculture Department's Wheat Division.

Under the scholarship program, each student is the recipient of a $300 stipend to support independent study projects related to the production or nutritional aspects of wheat and wheat products. Students also receive college credit for the research, conducted under the supervision of instructors in the Institute of Agriculture and Home Economics.

The winners are Julie Bergmeier of DeWitt, Gale Lorens of Stratton, Audrey Ann Schropfer of Ohiowa, William Siefert of Bennet, John Scharf of Curtis and Dennis Andrews of Holbrook.

Trainers Usable For Creative Play

Long Island City, N.Y. (UPI) — New walking trainers for children with neuromuscular or coordinative disabilities include two that also can be used for creative play by normal children from preschool age through early elementary grades.

One device is a free-moving four-foot-long platform and the other, a four-foot-long suspended balance beam. A third trainer is an open, bent-tube grid that teaches handicapped children right foot-left foot progression.

Settlement Details Still Not Released

Omaha (UPI) — The proposed settlement involving the rights of the mentally retarded at the Beatrice State Home, hammered out during week-long talks between attorneys, apparently will not be revealed until next week.

Attorneys on both sides sent the proposed agreement to U.S. District Judge Albert G. Schatz late Monday. Schatz recessed the trial indefinitely earlier in the day when a settlement appeared imminent.

On orders from Schatz, lawyers refused to release the details of the proposed settlement. Schatz must approve the settlement before it would become binding.

Pat Green, a Creighton University law professor appointed by the court as an intermediary, said Gov. J. James Exon's philosophy of treatment for the mentally retarded made the case easier to resolve.

The suit claimed the Beatrice home residents were deprived of their constitutional rights because they allegedly did not receive adequate treatment. It also contended treatment should be given in a less restrictive setting.

The settlement is reported to involve reducing the more than 1,000 population at the home by about 75%, and increase treatment at community-based centers.

In addition, the settlement is said to establish a panel to review any federal court-approved placements of the mentally retarded and for the home to remain under the State Department of Public Institutions with community programs under the department's office of mental retardation.

The suit was filed in 1972 against the state on behalf of five children at the home. The U.S. Justice Department entered the case, which became a class action, and appeared to have played a major role in negotiations. The state claimed it was moving to correct some of the complaints alleged in the suit.

The settlement also is expected to expand the treatment program at the home and in community clinics, require periodic evaluation of progress and treatment of individuals and prohibit patients being placed at the home if proper local programs were available.

Dr. Patricia Sailor

Sailor Goes To Louisiana State

Dr. Patricia Sailor, the new director of the School of Home Economics at Louisiana State, said she feels qualified to assume this administrative position. "It's been people and programs, many of them here at Nebraska, that have made it possible for me to make this move," she said.

In order to accept her position at Louisiana State, Dr. Sailor recently resigned from her post as associate dean of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Home Economics and as assistant director of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

She joined the University of Nebraska staff in 1968 as associate professor of textiles, clothing and design and was promoted to professor in 1970.

"At the time I came to UNL from the University of Texas, the textiles, clothing and design department was growing rapidly. Now there has been substantial growth in the diversity of programs being offered to meet the increasing enrollment demands."

Dr. Sailor took an administrative internship sponsored by the American Council on Education at the University of Cincinnati during a leave of absence from UNL in 1973-74. She felt that it helped in terms of professional growth and that it made a difference in her effectiveness in the dean's office. She was named associate dean of the college in 1973 and has served in that post since.

"One of the nice things about Nebraska is that there are many different kinds of people to work with here," she said. "There are many intangible ways it was rewarding to be a faculty member here. In these times when educational institutions are facing financial crunches, there have to be other kinds of rewards for faculty if they're going to be happy. I think here at Nebraska faculty have the opportunity and the climate that allows them to develop and grow."

Dr. John C. Woodward has been appointed as the new associate dean of the College of Home Economics at the University of Nebraska. He has served as chairman of the Department of Human Development and the Family since he came to UNL in 1966.

Cook Set To Retire From Bankers Life

George B. Cook will retire this week as chairman of Bankers Life Nebraska.

Cook has worked for the Lincoln-based insurance firm for 44 years. He was named executive vice president and financial officer of the company in 1954, president in 1958 and chairman in 1969.

Cook is known for his involvement in civic activities. He was instrumental in the development of Gateway Shopping Center, Lincoln Industrial Park and Nebraska Center for Continuing Education. He worked for the purchase of the former Lincoln Air Base by the City of Lincoln.

He also served the University of Nebraska-Lincoln as chairman of the University of Nebraska Foundation board of directors. He is a past president and life member of the University's Alumni Assn.

Cook is a past director of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, past president and director of the Lincoln Chamber Industrial Development Corp. and current president of the Lincoln Industrial Park management board. He is a director and member of the executive committee of the Business Development Corp. of Nebraska.

George B. Cook

Cook recently announced he will serve on an advisory committee for Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign. He is past state chairman of the Republican National Finance Committee.

Scottsbluff Man Escapes Office, Is Recaptured

Gering (AP) — An intensive search by local police, volunteer firemen, county authorities and the State Patrol ended with the capture of a Scottsbluff man early Monday.

A 16-year-old Scottsbluff girl, listed as a runaway, was taken into custody at the same time.

A check revealed another warrant for Salazar's arrest had been issued by Harris County, Tex.

After being returned to the Scottsbluff County Jail, Salazar bolted from the office while two officers were talking.

Two hours later, he was recaptured.

Group Against UP Line Abandonment

Stapleton (UPI) — A weekend meeting was held to organize opposition to Union Pacific Railroad plans to abandon the UP line between Stapleton and Arnold.

Some 30 persons who attended the meeting were urged to write letters to their congressional representatives, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Nebraska Public Service Commission.

Purpose of the letters is to secure a public hearing on abandonment plans.

During the meeting, Cecil Weems, co-owner of the Stapleton Mill and Elevator, said he was told UP has been planning the abandonment for some time. He said UP employees told him in 1960 they had orders "not to replace ties west of Arnold and very few east of Arnold."

It was suggested that opponents seek support from such groups as the National Farmers Organization, the Grange, the Farm Bureau and others. "The louder you scream, the more you're going to accomplish," Weems said.

A similar meeting is planned Thursday night in the fire hall in Callaway.

On file with the Interstate Commerce Commission is a Union Pacific request to abandon the 19.6-mile segment between Stapleton and Arnold. UP said in the application that low traffic volume doesn't justify costs of improvements needed to keep the line in operation.

UNL Summer Enrollment Up

Combined summer session enrollment at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln increased 11% over last year, according to Dr. Alan Seagren, director of summer sessions.

Total enrollment for the pre-session, eight-week and two five-week sessions was 14,472, a gain of 1,450 students over the same four sessions last year.

Matzke To Go Ahead With Plans

Stan Matzke, director of the Department of Administrative Services, said Monday that he would go ahead with plans to develop a computerized system of information on state employees despite objections from the University of Nebraska.

Matzke said the university has objected on policy grounds, but was not blocking the program on the technical level.

Matzke said he would go ahead with the system because he has a mandate from the Legislature.

He said that over half of the state budget went to salaries and it was important to the Legislature and administration to have information on the state employees.

The first stakes and handicap races over one mile this season highlight the third week of horse racing at the State Fairgrounds. Friday's featured attraction is the $6,000-added Nebraska State Fair Breeders' Special for 3-year-olds. Nominations close at 5 p.m. Wednesday with weights released later that afternoon. Saturday's highlight is the $7,000 President's Cup Handicap for 3-year-olds & up. Nominations close at 5 p.m. Wednesday with weights released later that afternoon. Among the prospects for the Breeders' Special are Charlie Murnan's Hickory Lick; Laddie Hirsch's Boldigan; Ronald Coats' Swigle; John and Scott Corman's Putnam; Harold Kleinschmidt's Klein's Boy; Mike Kemling's Zippi's Magic; the Kemling Bros. Inc.'s Roman Zipper; Wayne Riney's Ringy Dugy; Mrs. Delbert Rathman's Slipped In Space and Daryl Reher's Draft Supreme. The value of the President's Cup race has been increased $2,000 from last year's $5,000. Last year's winner was M.D. Van Patten's Merrill's Flight, who defeated Ben's Whiz and Bed A Bundle. This will be the final week for 5 p.m. post times on weekdays. Weekday post time for the last two weeks of the Lincoln season will move to 4:30 p.m. Saturday post times remain at 2 p.m. After two weeks of Lincoln racing, the jockey and trainer leaders remain the same — Terry Barnes pacing the riders and Larry Frazee leading the trainers. Barnes added two points to his lead last week over Wayne Anderson and now enjoys a 13-point margin. Barnes and Anderson are the only riders with more than 10

New Guidelines
After a Monday meeting with several horsemen, State Fairgrounds' general manager Henry Brandt has issued new guidelines for the purses during the last three weeks of Lincoln racing. Brandt said the minimum purse will be $2,300. He said that a $800 increase has been added to the purse schedule for races matching $1,500-$2,500 claimers. An $800 increase has been added to the scheduled purse of races with $3,500-$5,000 claimers.

Passing Game South Asset

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Writer
Crete — There were the usual question marks here Monday as the South team started workouts for the 17th Shrine Bowl football game Aug. 9 in Lincoln.

One thing, however, seemed clear. The South intends to put the ball in the air.

Five quarterbacks are listed on the Rebel roster. Three are not considered pass-oriented quarterbacks and all three are training under the assumption they'll play in the defensive secondary. The two remaining signal-callers, Lincoln Southeast's Tim Hager and Omaha Ryan's Bruce Perdue, were the state's top two Class A passers last fall. "We definitely will throw the football," promised South head coach Jim Nolan of Minden.

Not only can Hager and Perdue pitch the ball with accuracy. They're blessed with such targets as wide receivers Randy Foster of Southeast and Omaha Westside's John Ingram and Nebraska-bound tight ends Brian Horn of Westside and John Selko of Lincoln East.

Despite having athletes with strong passing and receiving credentials, Nolan pointed out that Shrine Bowl teams typically avoid the aerial game. The Shrine passing record, for instance, is 155 yards by the North's Larry Engleman of Scottsbluff in 1969. Hager and Perdue reacted to that statistic with surprise.

Nolan though stressed "when you assemble 33 players, you rarely pass more than 30 per cent, because you've got to have good runners. Mixing and balancing your attack is most important."

"I don't know," he joked, "maybe we'll go into the old Bear spread and throw every play."

City Qualifiers Set For State

Greg Boosalis and Mike Schuchart led the qualifiers in their respective age groups in the Nebraska Amateur Golf Association qualifying tournament at Holmes golf course Monday. Boosalis led the 17 and under group with a 35-37-72 followed by Mike Huggert with a 36-39-75. Schuchart carded a 39-38-77 in the 15 and under group followed by runner up Clay Anderson with a 38-42-80. All four golfers will now go to the State meet Aug. 10-12 in Norfolk.

According to official weigh-in charts, Omaha South's Oudous Lee is the heaviest South player at 230 pounds with Lincoln Southeast's Kelvin Roehrs next at 224 pounds. The lightest are Southeast's Foster at 148 pounds and Omaha Westside's John Ingram at 150.

Nolan, an assistant coach under Don Johnson two years ago in the South's 20-6 win, is eager for "the challenge to show Nebraska people how good high school football is in this state."

Some assistants are Centennial's Rod Boss, Cozad's Les Stencel and Millard's Don Bailey. "I don't really know how to say it, because we're definitely here to win and want to win," Nolan said, "but the emphasis shifts after you visit the Shrine hospital in Minneapolis. Something changes in yourself and the players. You finally realize who really wins."

Preparation Gives North Head Start

As a result of the effort put forth by Jacobson and his three-man staff prior to the camp's opening, his team is a full stride ahead of the South team in preparation for the August 9 game at Lincoln's Memorial Stadium.

When the 33 all-stars reported

Altman Plans Change

By DAVE SITTLER
Crete — Sunday afternoon, Dirk Altman figured he'd spend the rest of the summer playing baseball with Crete's Legion team.

Monday morning, Altman was wearing football pads and preparing to play in Nebraska's 17th annual Shrine Bowl, Aug. 9. Altman's quick switch from baseball gear to football togs was necessitated when Boys Town halfback Donald Nimmo failed to report to the south Shrine camp at Doane College. "Coach Nolan (South head coach Jim Nolan) called Sunday afternoon to see if I could play," Altman said. "I was gone playing baseball, but he called again last night (Sunday) and I reported this morning."

Nolan, Minden's head football coach, said "Altman was our first alternate when we picked our 33-man team. We're extremely pleased he was able to join the team on such short notice."

Altman, who earned all-state honors while playing for Wilber last season, expressed delight and excitement over joining the Nolan's south squad.

"It's always been one of my goals in sports to play in the Shrine game," he said. "I couldn't believe it when I got the call to play."

A powerful running back for the Wolverines, Altman's season was cut short last year when he suffered a knee injury against Harvard.

Missing the final two games of the season, Altman underwent surgery on the knee, which he says "still bothers me a little." Altman, who will probably see duty as a defensive back, indicated he is going to continue his football career at the University of Nebraska this fall.

"The Nebraska coaches talked to me about walking on, and I've decided to give it a try," he said. In fact, Altman was planning on driving to Lincoln this week to register for his fall classes at the university.

"I guess that (registration) will have to wait a few days," a happy Altman said.

Monday morning for orientation, each found himself assigned to either offense or defense, an assignment that usually isn't made until after the coaching staff has had a chance to evaluate each player individually.

"We (the coaching staff) sat down as a group before we got here to decide where we think each player will help us the most," said Jacobson, head coach of Metro-champion Omaha Burke. "These assistants (Jim Puetz, Columbus Scotus, Jim Blesser, Randolph and Bill Juelis, Bridgeport) are spread out enough and know enough coaches that we were able to find out enough about each player to assign positions."

"Some coach will tell you that one kid was better on offense or another was good on defense," Jacobson said. "So we made our decisions from that information plus looking at film."

Previewing films of the prospective players has been the time-honored way of finding out how the players stack up offensively and defensively, but Jacobson said if he had it to do over, he wouldn't spend near as much time on films.

"Game films can be so deceiving for coaches," he said. "You have to take into account different circumstances like who the team was playing. It's just hard to make a valid observation."

"Now, this way if a kid comes into camp knowing where he's going to be playing, he'll work out better at that position," Jacobson added.

The North players won't be restricted to those positions to the point where they can't switch according to the head coach. "If we find we've made a mistake, it's not too late to make a change," he said. "And if we have someone like Cotton (Barney of Burke) or Sorensen (Paul of Benson) that can play both ways, they still might."

Just looking at his 33-man squad, Jacobson was pleased with the physical condition they appeared to be in.

Paul Vasquez of Bridgeport reported as the biggest player in the camp at 6-0, 233-pounds, while Omaha Benson's Bobby Bass at 5-6, 142-pounds was the lightest.

"We're looking forward to see what all these kids can do," Jacobson said. "Sometimes in all-star games like these, the stars won't produce as well as the average ball players."

Jacobson is loaded with the so-called stars as he predicts "probably 28 or 29 will go on to play college ball somewhere."

The North has two fine quarterbacks capable of running Jacobsen's Burke wishbone-style offense, the first time such an offense has been used in the annual affair.

Lee Sapp of Burke and Bill Gogan of Ord both come from wishbone backgrounds to direct the attack.

Behind Sapp and Gogan are a group of outstanding backs chosen for their potential in the wishbone attack.

Three year all-stater Bass is joined by Ord's Greg Suelter, a 2,000 yard all-state rusher and Lincoln Northeast's Dan Cass, another all-stater, as halfbacks.

Lincoln High's Mike Washington and eight-man product Brad Hoffman of Chambers will provide the quickness needed at the fullback position.

Jacobson is certain there won't be any problem for the talented backs to adapt to the wishbone.

"Bass ran out of the tight 'T' which is similar to the wishbone, Suelter ran the wishbone and Cass also ran a similar style," he said. "These kids shouldn't have any trouble picking up the formation."

Jacobson is practicing his squad three times a day (9 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.) until he thinks they can cut back the 2 p.m. session after the kicking game is in.

"We won't be doing a lot of hitting, mostly dummy drills," he said. "We don't want to try and get anybody hurt."

"We also want to try and keep the hands off those two guys," he said pointing to Gogan and Sapp, his only quarterbacks.

Just because the North is wishbone oriented, Jacobson said not to count the pass out completely as both quarterbacks can throw.

"We've got the basic pass patterns," he said. "We try to throw when they least expect it. It's there (the pass), and we'll spend a lot of time on it."

the state's leading prep rusher last season. The Ord standout earned a Nebraska football scholarship. Stroh will join him on the Cornhusker freshman team this fall.

Nolan said "I'm not going to run any prisoner of war camp or anything like that." Rather, he added, "when and how much we work will be dictated by the weather."

The South is scheduled to work out at 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. daily. "If it's very, very warm," Nolan said, "we'll work out in shorts in the afternoon and come back in the evening."

This week's hard-hitting contact will be limited to Thursday morning practice and Sunday's game-type scrimmage, according to Nolan.

"Next week," he said, "hitting will be very sparse... just when necessary. We don't want to risk injuries."

New Guidelines

After a Monday meeting with several horsemen, State Fairgrounds' general manager Henry Brandt has issued new guidelines for the purses during the last three weeks of Lincoln racing.

Brandt said the minimum purse will be $2,300.

He said that a $600 increase has been added to the purse schedule for races matching $1,500-$2,500 claimers. An $800 increase has been added to the scheduled purse of races with $3,500-$5,000 claimers.

Fremont — North Shrine football head coach Larry Jacobsen arrived at the opening of camp Monday at Midland College prepared for action.

As a result of the effort put forth by Jacobsen and his three-man staff prior to the camp's opening, his team is a full stride ahead of the South team in preparation for the August 9 game at Lincoln's Memorial Stadium.

When the 33 all-stars reported

Altman Plans Change

By DAVE SITTLER

Crete — Sunday afternoon, Dirk Altman figured he'd spend the rest of the summer playing baseball with Crete's Legion team.

Monday morning, Altman was wearing football pads and preparing to play in Nebraska's 17th annual Shrine Bowl, Aug. 9.

Altman's quick switch from baseball gear to football pads was necessitated when Boys Town halfback Donald Nimmo failed to report to the south Shrine camp at Doane College.

"Coach Nolan (South head coach Jim Nolan) called Sunday afternoon to see if I could play," Altman said. "I was gone playing baseball, but he called again last night (Sunday) and I reported this morning."

Nolan, Minden's head football coach, said "Altman was our first alternate when we picked our 33-man team. We're extremely pleased he was able to join the team on such short notice."

Altman, who earned all-state honors while playing for Wilber last season, expressed delight and excitement over joining the Nolan's south squad.

"It's always been one of my goals in sports to play in the Shrine game," he said. "I couldn't believe it when I got the call to play."

A powerful running back for the Wolverines, Altman's season was cut short last year when he suffered a knee injury against Harvard.

Missing the final two games of the season, Altman underwent surgery on the knee, which he says "still bothers me a little."

Altman, who will probably see duty as a defensive back, indicated he is going to continue his football career at the University of Nebraska this fall.

"The Nebraska coaches talked to me about walking on, and I've decided to give it a try," he said.

In fact, Altman was planning on driving to Lincoln this week to register for his fall classes at the university.

"I guess that (registration) will have to wait a few days," a happy Altman said.

Monday morning for orientation, each found himself assigned to either offense or defense, an assignment that usually isn't made until after the coaching staff has had a chance to evaluate each player individually.

"We (the coaching staff) sat down as a group before we got here to decide where we think each player will help us the most," said Jacobsen, head coach of Metro-champion Omaha Burke.

"These assistants (Jim Puetz, Columbus Scotts, Jim Blesser, Randolph and Bill Juells, Bridgeport) are spread out enough and know enough coaches that we were able to find out enough about each player to assign positions."

"Some coach will tell you that one kid was better on offense or another was good on defense," Jacobsen said. "So we made our decisions from that information plus looking at film."

Previewing films of the prospective players has been the time-honored way of finding out how the players stack up offensively and defensively, but Jacobsen said if he had it to do over, he wouldn't spend near as much time on films.

"Game films can be so deceiving for coaches," he said. "You have to take into account different circumstances like who the team was playing. It's just hard to make a valid observation."

"Now, this way if a kid comes into camp knowing where he's going to be playing, he'll work out better at that position," Jacobsen added.

The North players won't be restricted to those positions to the point where they can't switch according to the head coach. "If we find we've made a mistake, it's not too late to make a change," he said. "And if we have someone like Cotton (Barney of Burke) or Sorensen (Paul of Benson) that can play both ways, they still might."

Just looking at his 33-man squad, Jacobsen was pleased with the physical condition they appeared to be in.

Paul Vasquez of Bridgeport reported as the biggest player in the camp at 6-0, 233-pounds, while Omaha Benson's Bobby Bass at 5-6, 142-pounds was the lightest.

"We're looking forward to see what all these kids can do," Jacobsen said. "Sometimes in all-star games like these, the stars won't produce as well as the average ball players."

Jacobsen is loaded with the so-called stars as he predicts "probably 28 or 29 will go on to play college ball somewhere."

The North has two fine quarterbacks capable of running Jacobsen's Burke wishbone-style offense, the first time such an offense has been used in the annual affair.

Lee Sapp of Burke and Bill Gogan of Ord both come from wishbone backgrounds to direct the attack.

Behind Sapp and Gogan are a group of outstanding backs chosen for their potential in the wishbone attack.

Three year all-stater Bass is joined by Ord's Greg Suelter, a 2,000 yard all-state rusher and Lincoln Northeast's Dan Cass, another all-stater, as halfbacks.

Lincoln High's Mike Washington and eight-man product Brad Hoffman of Chambers will provide the quickness needed at the fullback position.

Jacobsen is certain there won't be any problem for the talented backs to adapt to the wishbone.

"Bass ran out of the tight 'T' which is similar to the wishbone, Suelter ran the wishbone and Cass also ran a similar style," he said. "These kids shouldn't have any trouble picking up the formation."

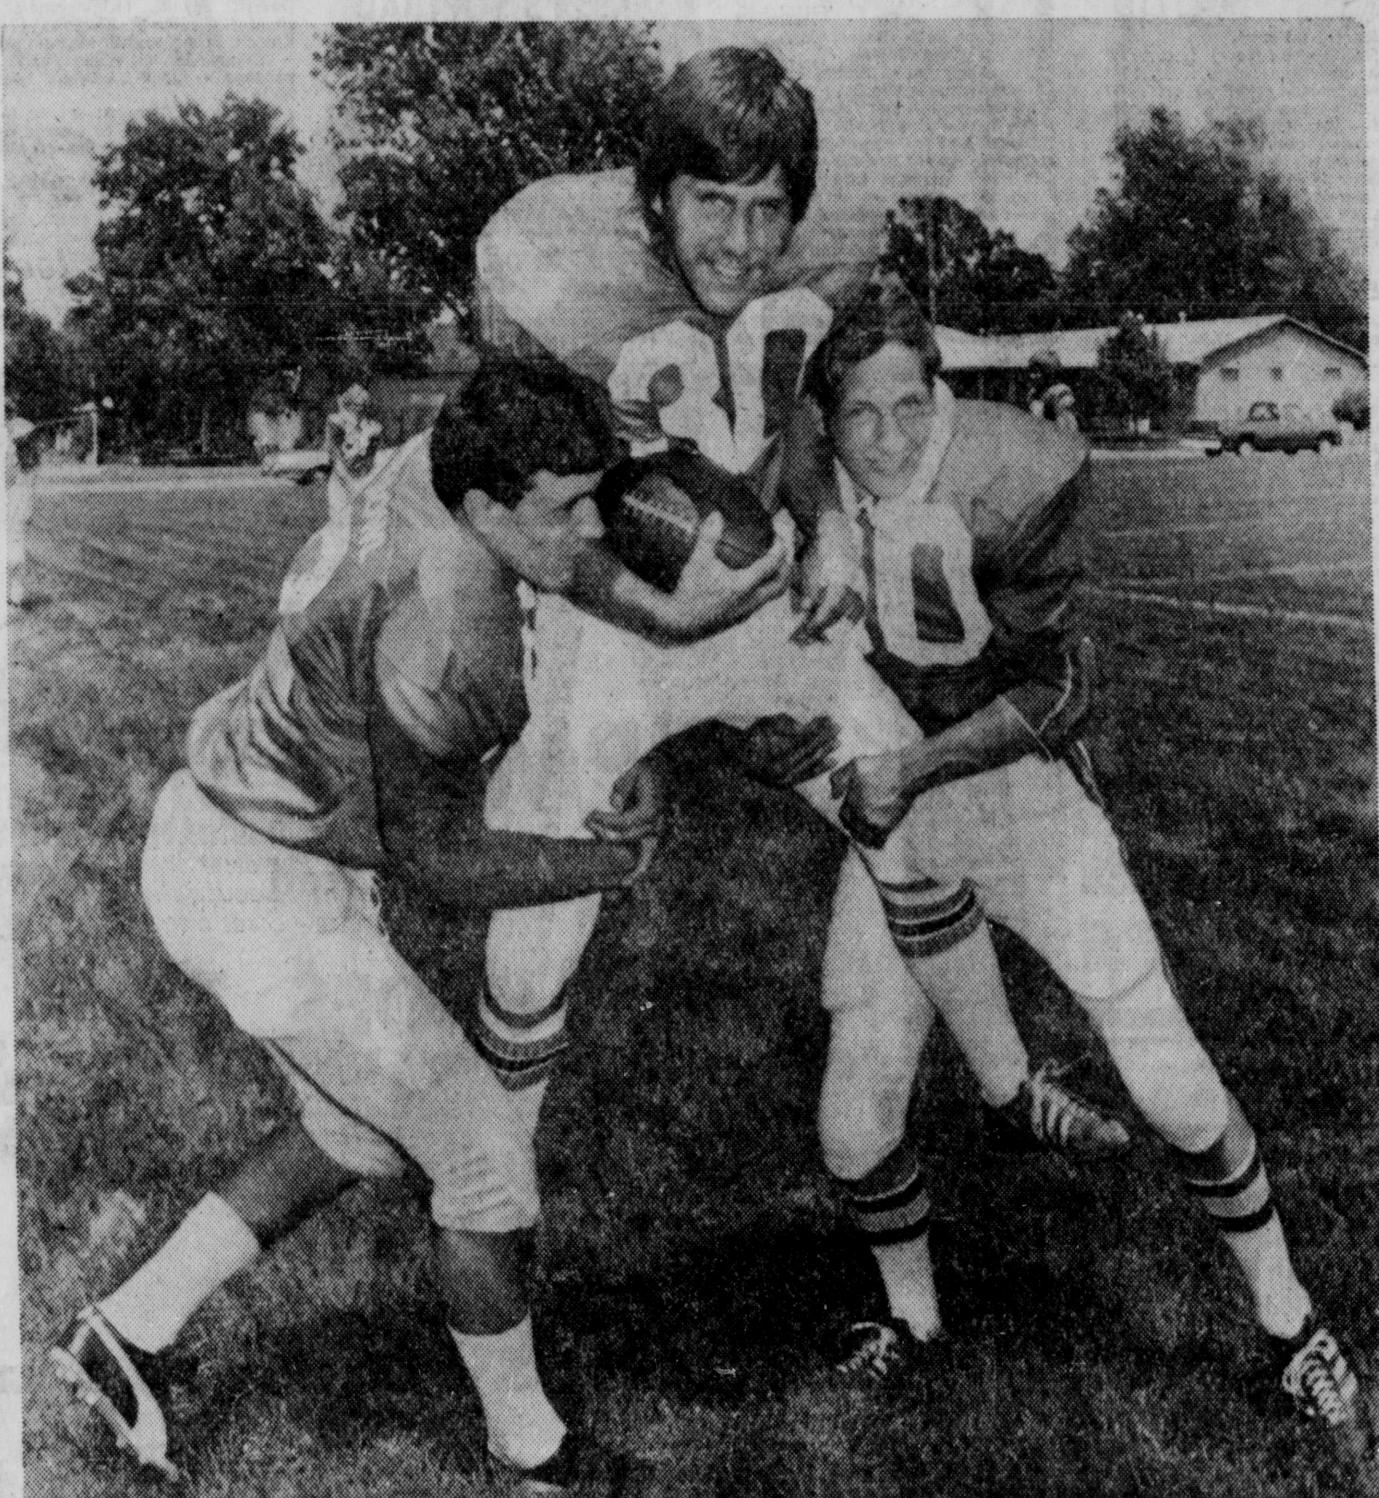

Jacobsen is practicing his squad three times a day (9 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.) until he thinks they can cut back the 2 p.m. session after the kicking game is in.

"We won't be doing a lot of hitting, mostly dummy drills," he said. "We don't want to try and get anybody hurt."

"We also want to try and keep the hands off those two guys," he said pointing to Gogan and Sapp, his only quarterbacks.

Just because the North is wishbone oriented, Jacobsen said not to count the pass out completely as both quarterbacks can throw.

"We've got the basic pass patterns," he said. "We try to throw when they least expect it. It's there (the pass), and we'll spend a lot of time on it."

the state's leading prep rusher last season. The Ord stand-out earned a Nebraska football scholarship. Stroh will join him on the Cornhusker freshman team this fall.

Junior Golf
The tenth annual Lincoln Junior Golf Course Championship tournament, sponsored by the Lincoln Association of Life Underwriters, open to boys and girls from age eight through 15, is set for Aug. 6-9.

Entry blanks, available at the Jim Ager course or at any of the four 18-hole courses in the Capital City, must be turned in by Sunday, Aug. 3.

The participants will be divided into four age flights for boys (8-9, 10-11, 12-13, and 14-15) and two age flights for girls (8-12 and 13-15).

Tennis Meet
Hastings (UPI) — The second annual Hastings Open Tennis Tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday.

All matches in the tournament, sponsored by the Hastings Tennis Club, will be two out of three sets.

Last year's tournament drew over 50 entries representing over 10 Nebraska communities as well as other states.

This year's tournament has been expanded to include a women's division, mixed doubles and a junior division.

Deadline Set
For Applications
The Lincoln Closed Tennis Tournament, sponsored by the Lincoln Tennis Association and the City Recreation Department, is scheduled for Aug. 7-10 at the Woods Tennis Complex.

Applications and entry fees for the tourney must be turned in to Jack Eidswick, 1116 Rose St. Apt. 2, by 5 p.m. Aug. 4. Application blanks are available now at the Woods Tennis shack.

Vilas Rips Solomon
Washington (UPI) — Argentina's Guillermo Vilas patiently outwaited and outmaneuvered hometown favorite Harold Solomon, 6-1, 6-3, Monday night to win the title at the $100,000 Washington Star International Tennis Championships and avenge a loss to Solomon in last year's tournament final.

Council Defers Decision On Ambulance Services

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The City Council has begun delving into the question of whether the private ambulance companies or the Lincoln Fire Department should be providing emergency medical services.

The question arose Monday night when the city's two private ambulance firms, Eastern and Shurtleff, requested between $130,000 and $186,000 apiece to upgrade their personnel and expand their service.

The lawmakers took no action Monday night but indicated they will make a decision next week on the issue.

$8,400 last year and Eastern lost $12,750 last year.

Krivoshia said city funds would enable the companies to provide 24-hour service and to employ better trained ambulance crews.

The amount of the subsidy would depend on which operating plan the city would adopt.

Dr. Ed Lyman, director of the health department, recommended a plan under which the companies would provide one crew on a 24-hour basis. The cost of that plan is an estimated $136,000 apiece.

Dr. Lyman said the only way the city should judge whether to subsidize the companies is to compare the costs. No such figures were available Monday.

However, representatives from the ambulance and related equipment costs from $30,000 to $40,800 apiece. Eastern has three ambulances and Shurtleff has four.

Bill Harding, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee of the City-County Implementation Commission, reported that the group has recommended that the private ambulance companies expand their services.

The committee has rejected a suggestion that the fire department take over those emergency calls.

More than half the requests for ambulance service are city-originated calls. Those are calls made by police officers, firefighters or made by citizens through the "911" emergency telephone system.

City To Install Recorder To Tape After-Hours Calls

Lincolinites who have questions or complaints about city business soon will be able to call City Hall and leave a message after the building closes.

Personnel Director Walt Mitchell told the City Council Monday he has ordered telephone answering equipment that will tape citizens' telephone calls from 4.30 p.m. until 8 a.m., when the offices open for business.

Mayor Helen Boosalis authorized the purchase of the equipment, an item which Mrs. Boosalis as a council member and Councilman Bob Sikyta have been requesting for several years.

Mitchell said the answering service will be aimed at receiving non-emergency calls since the tape won't be transcribed until the following day and a follow-up made by the appropriate city department.

Council members approved of the plan as they reviewed Mitchell's proposed $168,472 budget for 1975-76.

Sikyta and other council members asked Mitchell to work out a plan during the coming year under which various departments can pool employees and equipment. Sikyta has been hammering away at the equipment and personnel budgets of various departments in an attempt to cut back costs.

Krivoshia argued that the transferring of those duties to the fire department would cost taxpayers more money since the private ambulance companies can do the job cheaper.

The ambulance firms will go out of business, Krivoshia said, if the fire department were to take over the emergency duties. The firms couldn't afford to just transport people on non-emergency type calls.

Harding said it is time the city recognize it has a responsibility to provide emergency medical service, along with police and fire protection.

"Emergency medical services have been a poor country cousin," he argued.

The council asked for a report on what it should cost to have the fire department house two ambulances and provide backup services at nights and on weekends, staffed by firefighters. The council also asked for a report on what it would cost to have the fire department provide emergency medical service only.

One problem the lawmakers know they will run up against is the mill levy ceiling, which they are fast approaching in setting the budget for the 1975-76 fiscal year. Finance Director Jim Mallon said it would cost the city from .5 to .8 of a mill to meet the ambulance companies' request.

Why Don't Policemen Get Tickets?

The legality of the Lincoln Police Department's long-standing policy of not issuing traffic tickets to officers in the department has been questioned by Lincoln Mayor Helen Boosalis.

The mayor said Monday she can not understand why one segment of the population should be treated differently from another.

Acting Police Chief Dale Adams confirmed last week that Lincoln police officers are not given tickets for traffic citations.

Instead, he said, they are punished by the department and that internal discipline is often stiffer than the fine officers would pay if they were given citations.

Mrs. Boosalis said she has asked Adams to justify the practice. She plans to review the policy with the city attorney's office.

Adams said the purpose of the unwritten practice is to prevent a situation where a police officer is forced to testify against another officer in court. This would lead to internal police problems, he said.

Army Suspends Testing On Volunteers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army on Monday suspended testing chemical compounds with human volunteers at its Edgewood, Md., Arsenal.

At the same time, the Army said its inspector general has been ordered to check on what it called "some possible adverse information" about Dr. Van M. Sim, who has headed such testing programs for 19 years.

The statement did not give any details on the information about Sim, and Army spokesmen refused to elaborate.

In a statement, the Army said temporary suspension of the pending program for testing chemical compounds on human volunteers at Edgewood Arsenal "will permit the Army to determine all the facts connected with the test programs which were initiated in the 1950s."

It said 36 military volunteers now at Edgewood to participate in planned tests will be sent back to their home stations.

The inspector general was ordered to report back to acting Secretary of the Army Norman R. Augustine, and the Army said its findings and actions, if any, will be announced after that.

Sim will continue in his job while the investigation is under way, the Army said.

He could not be reached for comment immediately.

The spotlight recently was focused on testing of chemicals on humans at Edgewood with the drug LSD conducted with 585 officers and enlisted men between 1956 and 1967.

The Army says it is not experimenting with LSD any longer.

Sim, who defended the testing program at a Pentagon news conference last week, said he and his organization were awaiting approval from the Army surgeon general before conducting further experiments on a number of other drugs.

No experiments were under way, pending this approval, Sim said.

Augustine's action suspends any further tests along these lines for the time being.

At his news conference on Wednesday Sim, who is chief of the medical research division at the biomedical laboratory at Edgewood, said the LSD experiments were necessary in the study of a variety of chemicals and drugs which might pose potential problems for the Army and the civilian population. Researchers were interested in methods of detection and treatment, he said.

Sim said the 585 persons tested directly by the Army with LSD all were volunteers and were screened in advance by doctors and psychiatrists.

Sim acknowledged that soldiers who took part in the drug tests were not told in advance that they would be swallowing LSD.

He said such advance knowledge might have prejudiced the results of the experiments.

The Army has said that about 900 other persons were involved in LSD tests conducted by universities and private institutes under Army contract.

Officials Find Cause Of Poison Gas Leak

Honolulu (AP) — Failure to throw two switches in the final minutes of their mission set off a sequence that resulted in poison gas streaming into the spacecraft of the three Apollo astronauts, space officials said Monday.

The astronauts will be released from a hospital here Tuesday, but will remain in Hawaii for another 10 days to recover from the effect of the gas fumes.

Dr. Glynn S. Lunney, the technical director for the Apollo

Soyuz mission, said that astronauts Thomas P. Stafford, Vance D. Brand and Donald K. Slayton failed to throw a switch to start the automatic landing system as the spacecraft fell toward the Pacific Ocean.

"This may have happened as the result of the crew's attention being diverted," said Lunney. He said an unexplained squeal occurred on communications lines and this may have caused the astronauts to not throw the proper switches.

Dream Bicycle Ride Has Real Sad Ending

Salt Lake City (AP) — "They told me that he was climbing a hill on his bicycle and that he fell off," said 70-year-old Minnie Bell, describing the heart-attack death of her husband on the start of a 1,200-mile bicycle ride.

Mrs. Baty and her 71-year-old husband, Laurence, started their trip Friday morning from Denver but, within hours, Baty was dead.

Back in the couple's Salt Lake City home, Mrs. Baty estimated the couple traveled only about 15 miles on the road. She said she had gone ahead to make a reservation for the night at a motel on Denver's outskirts.

"He was just about two blocks down the hill from the Holiday Inn where we planned to stay," Mrs. Baty said, describing the end of the dream trip. "A man came in and told me they had to call an ambulance—that my husband had had an accident."

The elderly Batys planned to bike from Denver to their Kansas homeland. According to Mrs. Baty, they had set out about 10 a.m. from a Denver motel parking lot pulling a bicycle trailer loaded with supplies.

Congress Pay Hike Tacked On To Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate opened debate Monday night on an obscure bill giving members of Congress and other top federal officials an annual pay raise pegged to the cost of living.

The legislation was defended as simple justice and denounced as a backdoor attempt to insulate Congress from the effects of inflation.

The pay raise provision is tucked into a House-passed bill requiring the U.S. Postal Service to comply with the Occupational Health and Safety Act.

That bill, with the pay hike provision added, was approved by the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee on a 6-3 vote last Friday.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., announced he will offer an amendment to exclude members of Congress from the pay boost provisions.

He said the legislation appears to be permanent and with no ceiling.

If that is the case, Allen said, Supreme Court justices, who now are paid $60,000 a year, might be receiving $120,000 annually in eight years if inflation continues to rise at the present rate.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., the Post Office Committee chairman, said that would be an extreme and unexpected occurrence. And he said the raises — which are based on a scale of comparability to salaries paid annually to private industry executives — are needed to attract talented persons to government jobs.

Sen. Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, the committee's ranking Republican, spoke of "hard-pressed federal officials in the upper echelon" whom he said have "suffered long enough from congressional inaction."

Allen and Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Ind.-Va., complained that the pay raise was buried in a bill having nothing to do with pay raises, and Allen said members of Congress traditionally have sought to avoid a vote squarely on the issue of whether their own salary should be raised.

"They want to more or less come in the back door," Allen said.

2 Youths Hurt In Cycle Crash

Two young motorcyclists were slightly injured Monday in a head-on collision while riding in a field near 74th and Van Dorn.

David Morton, 15, of 7440 Lincolnshire, and Stephen Bass, 16, of 7200 S. Hampton, were admitted to St. Elizabeth's Hospital for observation. Both have bruises and abrasions, but apparently no serious injuries.

Fire officials who assisted the accident victims said that both bikes were apparently going at a "pretty high rate of speed."

General Mills 2-For-1 Split To Be Asked

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — The General Mills board of directors will recommend that shareholders approve a 2-for-1 split of the corporation's common stock, board Chairman James P. McFarland announced Monday.

The board also announced its intention to declare a 17-cent quarterly dividend for each split share to stockholders of record Oct. 10, 1975, assuming the split is approved.

Old Federal Building Resolution 'Watered'

City lawmakers accepted a watered down version of a resolution designating the Old Federal Building as a bicentennial project Monday night.

The City Council joined Mayor Helen Boosalis in committing the city to study the possible use of office space in the building, at 10th and P, by the city.

The officials expressed a willingness to cooperate with the Lincoln Foundation and University of Nebraska to study the possible construction of a performing arts center at the building. The officials also said they want to consider the possible restoration and maintenance of the Old City Hall, located on the south half of that block.

The council and mayor also said they want to encourage the construction of a parking facility near the Old Federal Building block.

Last week the council said it needs more information on how much it is going to cost the city to restore the two old buildings before committing the city's treasury to do the job. Council members are interested in the projects, but are facing a tight budget year in which the money may not be available.

Council Defers Decision On Ambulance Services

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The City Council has begun delving into the question of whether the private ambulance companies or the Lincoln Fire Department should be providing emergency medical services.

The question arose Monday night when the city's two private ambulance firms, Eastern and Shurtleff, requested between $130,000 and $186,000 apiece to upgrade their personnel and expand their service.

The lawmakers took no action Monday night but indicated they will make a decision next week on the issue.

Attorney Norm Krivosha, representing the two ambulance firms, said the city should help pick up the costs of providing ambulance service to the community. The council licenses the companies and sets the maximum rate the firms' can charge on each run, which is $41. That's $10 below the cost to each firm, he said.

More than half the requests for ambulance service are city-originated calls. Those are calls made by police officers, firefighters or made by citizens through the "911" emergency telephone system.

On many calls Krivosha said the companies are unable to collect their bills. Shurtleff lost

$8,400 last year and Eastern lost $12,750 last year.

Krivosha said city funds would enable the companies to provide 24-hour service and to employ better trained ambulance crews.

The amount of the subsidy would depend on which operating plan the city would adopt.

Dr. Ed Lyman, director of the health department, recommended a plan under which the companies would provide one crew on a 24-hour basis and a second crew on a 16-hour basis. The cost of that plan is an estimated $136,000 apiece.

Dr. Lyman said the only way the city should judge whether to subsidize the companies is to compare the costs. No such figures were available Monday. However, representatives from the companies reported that each ambulance and related equipment costs from $30,000 to $40,800 apiece. Eastern has three ambulances and Shurtleff has four.

Bill Harding, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee of the City-County Implementation Commission, reported that the group has recommended that the private ambulance companies expand their services. The committee has rejected a suggestion that the fire department take over those emergency calls.

Krivosha argued that the transferring of those duties to the fire department would cost taxpayers more money since the private ambulance companies can do the job cheaper.

The ambulance firms will go out of business, Krivosha said, if the fire department were to take over the emergency duties. The firms couldn't afford to just transport people on non-emergency type calls.

Harding said it is time the city recognize it has a responsibility to provide emergency medical service, along with police and fire protection.

"Emergency medical services has been a poor country cousin," he argued.

The council asked for a report on what it should cost to have the fire department house two ambulances and provide backup services at nights and on weekends, staffed by firefighters. The council also asked for a report on what it would cost to have the fire department provide emergency medical service only.

One problem the lawmakers know they will run up against is the mill levy ceiling, which they are fast approaching in setting the budget for the 1975-76 fiscal year. Finance Director Jim Mallon said it would cost the city from .5 to .8 of a mill to meet the ambulance companies' request.

Why Don't Policemen Get Tickets?

The legality of the Lincoln Police Department's long-standing policy of not issuing traffic tickets to officers in the department has been questioned by Lincoln Mayor Helen Boosalis.

The mayor said Monday she can not understand why one segment of the population should be treated differently from another. Acting Police Chief Dale Adams confirmed last week that Lincoln police officers are not given tickets for traffic citations.

Instead, he said, they are punished by the department and that internal discipline is often stiffer than the fine officers would pay if they were given citations.

Mrs. Boosalis said she has asked Adams to justify the practice. She plans to review the policy with the city attorney's office.

Adams said the purpose of the unwritten practice is to prevent a situation where a police officer is forced to testify against another officer in court. This would lead to internal police problems, he said.

Congress Pay Hike Tacked On To Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate opened debate Monday night on an obscure bill giving members of Congress and other top federal officials an annual pay raise pegged to the cost of living.

The legislation was defended as simple justice and denounced as a backdoor attempt to insulate Congress from the effects of inflation.

The pay raise provision is tucked into a House-passed bill requiring the U.S. Postal Service to comply with the Occupational Health and Safety Act.

That bill, with the pay hike provision added, was approved by the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee on a 6-3 vote last Friday.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., announced he will offer an amendment to exclude members of Congress from the pay boost provisions.

He said the legislation appears to be permanent and with no ceiling.

If that is the case, Allen said, Supreme Court justices, who now are paid $60,000 a year, might be receiving $120,000 annually in eight years if inflation

2 Youths Hurt In Cycle Crash

Two young motorcyclists were slightly injured Monday in a head-on collision while riding in a field near 74th and Van Dorn.

David Morton, 15, of 7440 Lincolnshire, and Stephen Bass, 16, of 7200 S. Hampton, were admitted to St. Elizabeth's Hospital for observation. Both have bruises and abrasions, but apparently no serious injuries.

Fire officials who assisted the accident victims said that both bikes were apparently going at a "pretty high rate of speed."

Army Suspends Testing On Volunteers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army on Monday suspended testing chemical compounds with human volunteers at its Edgewood, Md., Arsenal.

At the same time, the Army said its inspector general has been ordered to check on what it called "some possible adverse information" about Dr. Van M. Sim, who has headed such testing programs for 19 years.

The statement did not give any details on the information about Sim, and Army spokesmen refused to elaborate.

In a statement, the Army said temporary suspension of the pending program for testing chemical compounds on human volunteers at Edgewood Arsenal "will permit the Army to determine all the facts connected with the test programs which were initiated in the 1950s."

It said 36 military volunteers now at Edgewood to participate in planned tests will be sent back to their home stations.

The inspector general was ordered to report back to acting Secretary of the Army Norman R. Augustine, and the Army said its findings and actions, if any, will be announced after that.

Sim will continue in his job while the investigation is under way, the Army said.

He could not be reached for comment immediately. The spotlight recently was focused on testing of chemicals on humans at Edgewood by publicity given such tests with the drug LSD conducted with 585 officers and enlisted men between 1956 and 1967.

The Army says it is not experimenting with LSD any longer.

Sim, who defended the testing program at a Pentagon news conference last week, said he and his organization were awaiting approval from the Army surgeon general before conducting further experiments on a number of other drugs.

No experiments were under way, pending this approval, Sim said.

Augustine's action suspends any further tests along these lines for the time being.

At his news conference on Wednesday Sim, who is chief of the biomedical research division at the Edgewood, said the LSD experiments were necessary in the study of a variety of chemicals and drugs which might pose potential problems for the Army and the civilian population. Researchers were interested in methods of detection and treatment, he said.

Sim said the 585 persons tested directly by the Army with LSD all were volunteers and were screened in advance by doctors and psychiatrists.

Sim acknowledged that soldiers who took part in the drug tests were not told in advance that they would be swallowing LSD.

He said such advance knowledge might have prejudiced the results of the experiments.

The Army has said that about 900 other persons were involved in LSD tests conducted by universities and private institutes under Army contract.

Officials Find Cause Of Poison Gas Leak

Honolulu (AP) — Failure to throw two switches in the final minutes of their mission set off a sequence that resulted in poison gas streaming into the spacecraft of the three Apollo astronauts, space officials said Monday.

The astronauts will be released from a hospital here Tuesday, but will remain in Hawaii for another 10 days to recover from the effect of the gas fumes.

Dr. Glynn S. Lunney, the technical director for the Apollo-

Soyuz mission, said that astronauts Thomas P. Stafford, Vance D. Brand and Donald K. Slayton failed to throw a switch to start the automatic landing system as the spacecraft fell toward the Pacific Ocean.

"This may have happened as the result of the crew's attention being diverted," said Lunney. He said an unexplained squeal occurred on communications lines and this may have caused the astronauts to not throw the proper switches.

City To Install Recorder To Tape After-Hours Calls

Lincolinites who have questions or complaints about city business soon will be able to call City Hall and leave a message after the building closes.

Personnel Director Walt Mitchell told the City Council Monday he has ordered telephone answering equipment that will tape citizens' telephone calls from 4:30 p.m. until 8 a.m., when the offices open for business.

Mayor Helen Boosalis authorized the purchase of the equipment, an item which Mrs. Boosalis as a council member and Councilman Bob Sikyta have been requesting for several years.

Dream Bicycle Ride Has Real Sad Ending

Salt Lake City (AP) — "They told me that he was climbing a hill on his bicycle and that he fell off," said 70-year-old Minnie Baty, describing the heart-attack death of her husband on the start of a 1,200-mile bicycle ride.

Mrs. Baty and her 71-year-old husband, Laurance, started their trip Friday morning from Denver but, within hours, Baty was dead.

Back in the couple's Salt Lake City home, Mrs. Baty estimated the couple traveled only about 15 miles on the road. She said she had gone ahead to make a reservation for the night at a motel on Denver's outskirts.

"He was just about two blocks down the hill from the Holiday Inn where we planned to stay," Mrs. Baty said, describing the end of the dream trip. "A man came in and told me they had to call an ambulance—that my husband had had an accident."

The elderly Batys planned to bike from Denver to their Kansas homeland. According to Mrs. Baty, they had set out about 10 a.m. from a Denver motel parking lot pulling a bicycle trailer loaded with supplies.

continues to rise at the present rate.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., the Post Office Committee chairman, said that would be an extreme and unexpected occurrence. And he said the raises — which are based on a scale of comparability to salaries paid annually to private industry executives — are needed to attract talented persons to government jobs.

Sen. Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, the committee's ranking Republican, spoke of "hard-pressed federal officials in the upper echelon" whom he said have "suffered long enough from congressional inaction."

Allen and Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Ind-Va., complained that the pay raise was buried in a bill having nothing to do with pay raises, and Allen said members of Congress traditionally have sought to avoid a vote squarely on the issue of whether their own salary should be raised.

"They want to more or less come in the back door," Allen said.

HOW TO MAKE $12,500 A YEAR IN YOUR SPARE TIME

This is the chance of a lifetime to join the Electronic Amusement Industry that last year grossed $250 million and has a projection for the next 12 months to be $1 Billion Dollars. As quoted by national financial newspaper (name of media upon request).

ALL CASH BUSINESS

As an example from the University of Miami one unit takes $750 a week. One unit in the Marriott Hotel has averaged $138 a week for 10 months. In fact yields of well over $100 a week average are not unusual. As quoted by national financial newspaper (name of media upon request).

Applicants must aspire to high weekly earnings and have a minimum cash investment of $4,990 (secured by equipment) with a very high weekly net return.

Fall Seen In Profits On Steel

NEW YORK (AP) — Two steel companies, including the nation's third largest, reported sharp drops in second quarter earnings Monday. Both cited higher costs and lower shipments.

National Steel Corp., ranking just behind United States Steel Corp. and Bethlehem Steel Corp. in size, said net income for the three months ended June 30 totaled $12.17 million or 65 cents a share, down 72% from the $44.1 million or $2.37 a share reported in the same period a year ago.

National's sales were down to $511.26 million from $661.06 million a year ago.

Lykes-Youngstown, whose principle business is steel, said profits for the quarter were $13.71 million or $1.39 a share. That was a drop of 60% from the $34.13 million or $3.42 a share in the 1974 quarter.

Sales fell to $384.55 million from $457.3 million a year ago, Lykes-Youngstown said.

After a boom last year and during the first quarter, the recession caught up with steel companies in the second quarter, the two managements reported. Customers lived off inventories and cut purchases.

As a result, National said primary steel output during the quarter dropped 19% from the same quarter in 1974 while shipments skidded 37% from the year before.

National Chairman George A. Stinson said the company had early indications that demand would increase in August and September.

Both Stinson and Lykes-Youngstown Chairman J.T. Lykes Jr., warned of price increases, seen as necessary to cover higher labor costs, effective Aug. 1, and previously-unrecovered cost increases.

"Recent market weakness has been an obstacle to price increases up to this time," said Stinson. Now, he added, such increases were "imperative."

"Current unsatisfactory financial results point up the inherent difficulty faced by our company and the steel industry as a whole in meeting costs of badly needed expansions," Stinson said.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Tuesday
If you are curious about the financial rating of an individual, consult the Taurus man. He does not know the answer immediately, he has ways of finding it. The Taurus man can be deceived in some areas, but seldom where money is concerned.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You get major points across. You achieve beneficial changes. Creative resources are constructively utilized. Member of opposite sex pays meaningful compliment. Gemini, Leo and Virgo are likely to be in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You receive results of appraisal, property or otherwise. There are likely to be behind-scenes maneuverings. Another Taurus - and a Libra - could figure prominently. Costs of remodeling jobs are major concerns. Beautiful surroundings. Fulfill commitment to family member.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You receive results of appraisal, property or otherwise. There are likely to be behind-scenes maneuverings. Another Taurus - and a Libra - could figure prominently. Costs of remodeling jobs are major concerns. Beautiful surroundings. Fulfill commitment to family member.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Hidden clause may be in picture. Check lease requirements, costs, obligations. You're asked to assume added responsibility. Reward factor is emphasized, but so is pressure. Key is to outline goal and to organize efforts, priorities.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Ability to communicate is enhanced. Write, advertise, publish, submit campaigns, formats. You are able to reach - and influence - more people than in recent past. Creative energy flows.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could gain access to privileged information. What was a puzzle falls into place. You get to heart of matters, you see "light of love" in eyes of one you deeply admire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Friend does a lot of talking - etc. (tell to check facts). Cycle is such that others, no matter how well-meaning, might mislead you. Aries and another Libra - and an Aquarius - figure prominently. Extracurricular activity is featured. You learn a lot through unorthodox procedure.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Highlight versatility, diversity - use material available - bright, creative way. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You gain co-operation of those who in recent past, were indifferent. Key is to socialize, experiment, enjoy people, places and challenges.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You do some tearing down for ultimate purpose of rebuilding. Emotional responses are honed to razor sharpness. Member of opposite sex figures prominently. Your "love nature" is activated. You create, imprint style, make changes, see truth as it exists.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Study Sagittarius message for valid hint. Your ability to make known your views is enhanced. People know what you want, what you can do - and they respect you. This can be opportunity to press forward, towards major objective.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Legal affairs require review. Know it and act accordingly. One who does a lot of talking is not as confident as might be apparent. Surface. Relative who offers aid actually needs help. Short trip helps rebuild domestic harmony.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Money, budget, purchases and sales figure in major ways. Accent is on techniques, methods, trimming waste and getting objectives in focus. Virgo and another Pisces figure prominently. You get chance to see as is, to evaluate in light of reality.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intuitive, a natural teacher, sensitive, moody, affectionate and sentimental. Leo and Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. Social life "opens up" in August, a month that will feature travel, special studies, fun and games, plus a satisfying of intellectual curiosity.

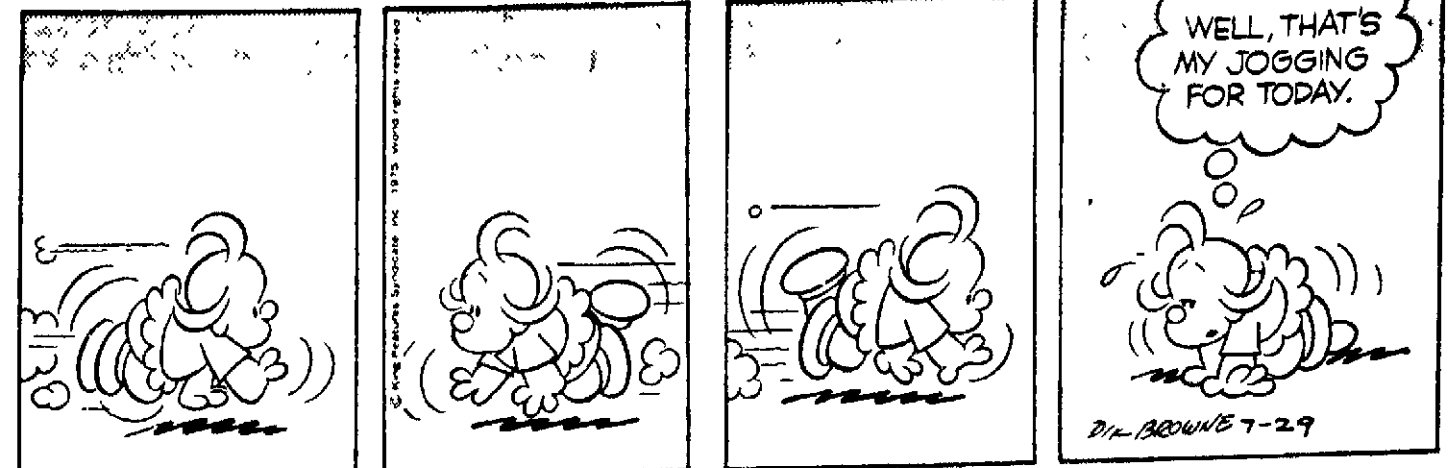

(Discover your love and money mates! Send 75 cents to Omarr Astrology Secrets, The Lincoln Star, P.O. Box 1111, Los Angeles, Calif. 90033. You'll find answers in Sidney Omarr's booklet, "Secret Hints for Men and Women.")

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle. The number of letters in the word you want to find is the key. If the number of letters is 4 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 2. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and count every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the key numbers. Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
